FIVE ICEMEN ARE CHARGED

Accused of Giving False Weight to Patrons In This City

Verdict on Robb Case to Come Wednesday—Four Others Arraigned Then

Five ice men employed by the Crystal Lake Ice Company of Newton Centre will come before the municipal court in this city next Wednesday forenoon. Four will be arraigned on charges of having delivered false weight cakes in various parts of the city, while one will appear before Judge Kennedy to hear a verdict of the case which was threshed out at length Friday.

Three of these ice men were originally summoned to appear Saturday, but upon suggestion of their counsel the cases were put over until next Wednesday. The defendants in the ice cases are William Cameron, Silas D. Haines, James E. Sample, Truman V. Carroll and John C. Robb.

Several weeks ago a complaint came to Chief of Police Mitchell from a number of families living on the south side of the city that icemen were delivering to them short weight cakes of ice. Patrolmen E. P. O'Halloran and H. W. Marriner were detailed on the case. They visited a number of houses for a fortnight or more immediately after ice had been delivered and weighed the cakes. In numerous instances the ice fell short in weight of the amounts the ice men are alleged to have claimed the cakes weighed.

As the price of ice in the Newtons has climbed skyward with the mercury this season, the cases are attracting widespread attention. That of John C. Robb, 29 years old, unmarried and living at 25 Pleasant street, Newton Centre, employed as a delivery man by George D. Miller, proprietor of the Crystal Lake Ice Company, occupied nearly three hours last Friday in the local court. After being threshed out at length Lawyer Thomas W. Proctor, appearing for the defendant, and City Solicitor Winfield S. Slocum for the prosecution, Judge Kennedy reserved his decision and announced that he will render it August 8, when the other cases will be called.

Mayor Warren There.

Mayor Edgar W. Warren was an interested listener to much of the testimony. There was an unusually large number of spectators, no local court case having attracted such attention in many months. Tongues and scales used by two patrolmen in testing the delivered cake of ice were exhibited and closely examined. Joshua A. Harding, sealer of weights and measures, pronounced the scales accurate. The spectators listened closely to the testimony and to the arguments of the lawyers. Upon the adjournment of the court they hung about the corridors and asked each other the now familiar slogan in Newton, "How'd you like to be the iceman?"

Robb was charged with having delivered to John L. Palmer a week ago Saturday afternoon, a cake of ice which he is alleged to have claimed weighed 100 pounds, but which in reality tipped the scales at but 88. By advice of his counsel he entered a plea of not guilty.

The first witness was patrolman E. P. O'Halloran, who saw Robb deliver the ice. The patrolman a few minutes later weighed it. He saw no money paid. Cross-examined he said he did not see the cake put into the chest. There was another small piece in the chest, but did not weigh that one. The big cake and the tongs had a gross weight of 90 pounds. The tongs weighed about 2 1/2 pounds. He received the scales from Chief of Police Mitchell.

Put up Ice Card.

John L. Palmer testified he was reading on his piazza Saturday afternoon when the ice wagon stopped. He went down to the wagon to see the ice. When a cake was brought in he asked how much it weighed. Robb told him 100 pounds. The witness asked how much it would be and he was told 35 cents. The ice was then weighed by patrolman O'Halloran and Marriner. Cross-examined, he said he put the ice card in the window himself. Had not seen the patrolmen before. Did not ask Robb to weigh the ice.

Patrolman Henry W. Marriner saw Robb take the ice into the dwelling without weighing it. He went into the house in two or three minutes and with patrolman O'Halloran weighed it.

Joshua A. Harding, sealer of weights and measures, pronounced the scales used by the policemen all right. He added that last Wednesday Mr. Miller brought him 21 pairs of scales to be tested. They were all good except one pair. Miller's scales had never before been tested by him, although he had been sealer for six years.

George D. Miller testified he had been an ice dealer 30 years. Robb was employed as a driver by him, being a helper last year, but a regular man this season. Witness pays him $14 a week, and believed Robb to be faithful and a good workman.

Guessed the Weight.

Robb then took the stand. He admitted having delivered ice to Mr. Palmer last Saturday. He said he trimmed the edge of the cake when he placed it in the chest; had talked with Mr. Palmer about the quality of the ice, but that was all. Palmer did not ask him to weigh it.

"I estimated the weight of the cake," said Robb. "From handling ice for a long time I have got a good idea of estimating the weight of cakes. I carried scales on the wagon, but if I thought a cake weighed what anyone wanted I did not actually weigh it."

He added that Mr. Miller had instructed him to always give good weight. He received 35 cents from Palmer for the cake.

Questioned by Judge Kennedy, Robb said that he did not weigh the particular piece, because it was not the custom. "Cakes average from 115 to 125 pounds," said he. "One can tell within a few pounds what the weight of any cake is. I always delivered 100 pounds at a time to Mr. Palmer."

When asked by Judge Kennedy how much of the ice sold is usually weighed, Robb replied that about one-third of the amount sold did not go onto the scales, but that the weight was estimated.

Patrolmen O'Halloran and Marriner and Mr. Palmer were in turn recalled to the stand. They asserted there were no chips of ice in the chest after the ice man had left the house.

"No Carelessness."

In his argument counsel Proctor asserted that it was not a case of carelessness. Persons acquire skill in estimating weights, he believed. He cited numerous cases of alleged giving of false weight dating back many years which had been quashed. He believed no imposition was being practiced on the public, and that to find Robb guilty it would be necessary to find that he used false scales with an idea of cheating.

City Solicitor Slocum, in his argument, said that Mr. Proctor's theory was the best thing for rogues that he had ever heard of. He asserted that customers cannot always be at home in order to ask to have their ice weighed.

Wanted to Quash.

A motion to quash was then filed by Mr. Proctor. He stated as his reasons four assertions. He claimed that there had been no offence committed known to law, no refusal to weigh the ice, no evidence of false weight and no evidence that Robb was not a dealer. This last evidence, he believed, was also necessary to convict the man.

The case of Stiles B. Haynes, charged with delivering to Arthur W. Farbell of Newton Highlands a cake which he is said to have claimed weighed 60 pounds, but which is alleged to have weighed only 44, was then called. Haynes entered a plea of not guilty.

On his Vacation.

Upon request of counsel Proctor, who wanted to go on a vacation, as he told the court, the trial of Haynes and the arraignment of the three other icemen who have been summoned, was put over to August 8. Judge Kennedy said he would render his decision on the Robb case at that time.

The State of Massachusetts takes justifiable pride in its high standard of education. Among the various schools, and it is interesting to note the many purposes for which schools are established, those for technical training along business lines do a grand work. Standing high among these schools is Burdett College of Business and Shorthand, 18 Boylston St., Boston. This is widely known as the College of Actual Business from the Start. Its students succeed because they learn by doing just what they will do in business when they leave there. The cost at Burdett is $37.50 per term, and the Secretary informs us that the registration for the Fall Term which commences Tuesday, September 4th, began very early this year.

WARRANT REFUSED

No Action Against Uncle of Malcolm Collins

Instead Boy is Sent Away for Being Stubborn

A warrant for the arrest of Daniel Collins, uncle of 14-year old Malcolm L. Collins, the boy who charged him with having branded him with a red hot poker, caused him to kneel on the bedroom floor all one night and once strung him up by the heels, was refused an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children last Friday.

The sensational charges preferred by the boy were the subject of a private hearing given before Judge Kennedy of the municipal court. The boy was brought out from the society's rooms by Special Officer B. J. Loring of the society. Officer Loring asked for a warrant for the arrest of the uncle.

After listening to all the evidence which the society had to present in the boy's behalf, Judge Kennedy took the youth in hand and put him through a rigid cross-examination. At the end of the hearing, which lasted over an hour, Judge Kennedy declined to issue a complaint upon which further action could be based.

The judge stated that in his opinion the boy was untruthful, and that the remarkable story he told was not substantiated from any other source, and was therefore not to be given credence.

The lad stuck to his previous story of having been terribly punished by his uncle. To a Graphic reporter he again related the alleged circumstances. Upon being closely questioned, however, he admitted that his father was still living, and that he had lied when he told the Newton police and the officers of the society that both his parents were dead.

The boy appeared very unconcerned throughout the ordeal. Outside the court room he chatted about "scraps" with other boys and told of his boyish experiences. He said he liked being cared for by "the society."

The lad was taken back to the rooms of the society in Boston early Friday afternoon. It was stated that he will probably be sent to some farm to spend the rest of the summer.

Before the lad was turned over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children the case was pretty thoroughly investigated by the local authorities. They gave little credence to the lad's sensational charges after making an investigation. Chief of Police Mitchell deemed it best, however, to turn the boy over to the society that he might be given a home where he could keep within bounds.

Denied He Was Dead

The case took a sudden turn Wednesday, when the Collins boy was summoned into a private session of the local court on a charge of being a stubborn child. The complaint was made by the boy's father, Thomas Collins of Woonsocket, who appeared very much alive.

When asked by a reporter about his alleged death a year ago last March, said by the boy to have occurred then, Mr. Collins very emphatically denied that he was dead. "There is no truth in the rumor," he asserted.

The father testified in the court session that the lad had never been of an especially mischievous character at home, but that he was always a pretty good liar. He said he had placed him in two or three places before he sent him to the uncle's house at Nonantum. The boy could not get along at any of the places.

The boy was committed to the Lyman school for an indefinite term. He cried bitterly throughout the proceedings.

IN THE MISSION FIELD.

The Great Work and Inspiring Example of Rev. George Wolfe Shinn, D. D.

The undersigned, a Committee appointed by Archdeacon Babcock in compliance with a vote of the meeting of the Archdeaconry of Lowell held at Winchester, Mass., on the seventh of June, 1906, "to compose and forward to Dr. Shinn a letter fittingly expressing the high estimate placed by the Archdeaconry on his life-long missionary activity, and its continued interest in him and whatever work he may be enabled by God's Providence to undertake," have attended to the duty assigned them, and have composed the letter hereto appended, which they are ready to transmit to Dr. Shinn with such modifications, if any, as the Archdeacon may suggest.

Newton, Mass., July, 1906.
Reverend George Wolfe Shinn, D. D., Summit, New Jersey.

Dear Sir:—
Pursuant to appointment made by Archdeacon Babcock in compliance with the unanimous vote passed at the meeting of the Archdeaconry of Lowell at Winchester, June 7th, 1906, directing that be prepared and transmitted to you an expression of the high appreciation entertained by the Archdeaconry of your distinguished services in the cause of Missions, and their affectionate interest and regard for you, presents to the Committee, to recall to memory some facts in your career that ought not to be forgotten in this connection.

If we are not mistaken, it is now more than forty years since upon entering the ministry you formed to yourself the high purpose of building mission churches where they were most needed and especially among the poor.

Beginning with such an enterprise in the outskirts of Philadelphia, you labored there faithfully and efficiently for some three years until your health, impaired by overwork, compelled a change.

Thence, if we are correctly informed, you went to Shamokin, Pa., where you held mission services among the miners and built up a church.

You went next to Lockhaven, Pa., where, in addition to your regular parish duties, you conducted a mission in a hall to the numerous colored people in that city.

You next accepted the charge of a parish among the iron workers in Troy, N. Y. It was a difficult field; but its cultivation was in the line of your desire, and "the poor had the Gospel preached to them." It is remembered that while there you originated and edited the missionary newspaper of the Diocese of Albany. In connection with St. Luke's Church you started a parish day-school, which led to your appointment as Head Master of St. Paul's School, an endowed institution under the auspices of St. Paul's Church in that city.

Your labors in Troy were crowned with success; but it became evident at length that you must choose between the two vocations of teaching and preaching.

To the good fortune of this Diocese you chose the latter; and thereupon you came to the city of Newton in 1875. Here for several years you ably edited a missionary newspaper. You found in Newton two organized parishes, Grace and St. Mary's, and a feeble mission for West Newton and Auburndale. To this you rendered effectual aid and were gratified to see it become strong enough to call to itself a rector.

Carrying forward your efficient work at Grace Church, you also began to lay new foundations at Newton Highlands. There, too, your wise and energetic efforts were blessed with success, so that they were at length able to erect a church edifice and engage a rector.

The third of your missions in this region was at Chestnut Hill. Within a year or two the church people in that vicinity became strong enough to have a clergyman of their own.

You cordially helped the new church, the Church of the Good Shepherd, at Watertown; about half of those engaged in it being members of your own Grace Church.

You held occasional services in Newtonville. The movement there culminated in the organization of St. John's Church.

We do not forget that you were for years a member of the Missionary Committee of this Diocese, and rendered valuable service as its Secretary. This Committee held meetings that created much and lasting interest in the plans undertaken for the spread of the Gospel.

During the last General Convention held in Boston two years ago your pre-eminent services in this field were recognized in your appointment as Chairman of the Committee on the great Missionary meetings, the extraordinary interest and success of which were due in good part to your judicious and efficient management.

It were long to enumerate in illustration of your exemplary zeal in this great cause the many articles you have published, the many eloquent appeals you have made, the many earnest sermons you have preached in your own and other parishes, and the many valuable contributions of money and effort you have secured in the promotion of Church Extension.

The Archdeaconry of Lowell, and all who know you well, must gratefully recognize these faithful, untiring, and highly successful labors of yours, the unselfish Christlike spirit which prompted them, and the inspiring example of consecration which you have thus given to the world.

Your name, dear Friend, should be honored, and your deeds held in affectionate and lasting remembrance by many thousands whom your ministrations have blessed. For the sake of others, may a kind Providence grant you health and strength long to continue your efforts for the promotion of righteousness. For yourself, may you receive daily tokens of esteem from the living. "As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends," and at last an abundant entrance into that Presence, where "they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."

(Signed) JOHN MATTESON,

—Mrs. H. A. Priest of Vista avenue has returned from an enjoyable vacation.

—Letter Carrier Harry A. Preston of Auburn street returned early this week from a fortnight's enjoyable vacation.

—Miss H. N. Childs left the latter part of this week for Salem Willows, where she will spend a few weeks' vacation.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Conover of Central street left early this week for Madison, Conn., where they will remain until early in September.

—Mr. A. M. Dolliver and Miss Dolliver of Central street left Tuesday for Gloucester, where they will sojourn for the rest of the season.

—Miss Blanche Noyes of Lexington street left Tuesday for East Northfield, where she will be the guest of friends for the next few weeks.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Hill of Central street left this week for a vacation of several weeks, which they will spend in visiting various resorts.

—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Almy of Woodbine street left last of this week for New Hampshire, where they will spend the rest of the summer.

—Mr. P. A. McVicker of Commonwealth avenue spent most of this week in Auburndale. He will return immediately to Popham Beach, however, where his family is summering.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Wiggins and family have returned from an enjoyable vacation of several weeks spent at Cushing, Mass. They are now occupying their residence on Bourne street again.

—Mr. J. Charles Kennedy, judge of the Newton municipal court, has returned from a brief vacation spent in the Provincias, and is now again located at the Woodland Park hotel.

—Mr. C. E. Richardson has returned to New York city, where he is in the employ of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, after a brief visit with friends in Auburndale and Weston.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Newell, who have been spending a week with friends in Paterson, N. J., left that city on Tuesday for Atlantic City, where they will remain for several weeks before returning to Auburndale.

—A well attended meeting of the Auburndale Mothers' Association took place Wednesday afternoon, the session being held in the Congregational church. Routine matters were transacted, and a social hour followed. The association plans to again begin an active season immediately after the close of the vacation season.

—At the Auburndale Congregational church Sunday morning service was conducted by Rev. Elbridge C. Whiting of South Sudbury, who preached a stirring sermon before a good sized congregation. The subject of the Sunday school session was "Jesus Dies with a Pharisee." The meeting of the Friendly class held at noon was conducted by Dr. S. W. Dike.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wildman are making preparations to move from Crescent street, where they have resided for a number of years, to Newton Upper Falls. A few months ago Mr. Wildman was promoted from a clerkship in the local postoffice to the position of clerk-in-charge at Newton Upper Falls. He succeeded Mr. William Dawson, who was made superintendent at Newton Highlands at the time of the resigning of Capt. Edgar N. Nash.

—One of the closest matches played this season on the Woodland Golf Club's excellent course was witnessed Friday afternoon, when "Tom" Stevenson and "Nipper" Campbell of the Country Club met J. G. Anderson and "Tom" McNamara of the Woodland Golf Club in a highly interesting foursome. It was a battle royal throughout and required an extra hole before the Country Club players acquired supremacy. Both sides missed four putts for the hole on the 18th green. The match was watched by an interested gallery of spectators.

—The Alice Gordon Gulick memorial hall connected with the International Institute for young women in Spain, in which many Auburndale persons have been interested in completing, has now nearly been completed, according to the annual report of the institute, which has just been received here. Money now on hand provides for the completion of the exterior. The library, reading room and assembly hall, all situated on the first floor of the structure, will also be completed at once so that they will be in readiness for use early in the autumn. A bronze tablet will be erected to the memory of Mrs. Gulick, who for a number of years resided with her family in Auburndale. During the past years not a few Auburndale residents have visited the institution and looked over the new structure while traveling abroad.

—On the course of the Woodland Golf Club, Saturday afternoon, the last scheduled tournament of the spring and summer season was played. The event was a bogey handicap competition. The event called out an unusually large entry list considering the vacation season, 41 players entering. By scoring 7 up Mr. B. Walter Godsoe won first prize. The second man was Mr. H. B. Richmond, who was one stroke behind Mr. Godsoe, with 6 up. Other scores were made as follows: B. W. Godsoe, 7 up; H. B. Richmond, 6 up; J. E. Oldham, 4 up; W. Fitzgibbon, 4 up; L. B. Folsom, 2 up; F. A. Edmonds, 2 up; E. E. Conover, 2 up; W. K. Farrington, 2 up; A. C. Burnett, 2 up; W. A. Hersey, 2 up; W. L. Church, 2 up; J. A. McLeod, 1 up; W. J. Pfeil, 1 up; H. B. Curtis, 1 up; F. COW ON RAMPAGE

Disturbed the Quiet of West Newton Sunday

Finally Rounded up by Police in Cowboy Style

A runaway cow created considerable excitement in West Newton Sunday afternoon. After racing across fields and through streets it was caught by three policemen and returned to its pasture.

The animal was moored in a field early in the day, but along in the afternoon she became restless and began to race about the field. Finally she got out onto Oak avenue and scared the children off that thoroughfare.

Soon a message came to police headquarters that a cow was running wild. Patrolmen McKenzie, Bailey and Martin Neagle were sent to apprehend the too frolicsome cow. After chasing her for a short time they caught the animal near Forest avenue. They returned her to the owner's pasture. The patrolmen were warmly complimented upon their exhibition of cowboy skill. The name of the owner was not given out.

Some of the residents of the vicinity asserted that the cow has suffered effects of the heat.

The three patrolmen were envied for their work from those who were privileged to witness their exhibition of cow catching. It was only about a fortnight ago that Sgt. Burke, and Patrolmen William F. Cody and N. Fred Bosworth had a wild west experience in rounding up a herd of eight steers near police station 3, the animals having escaped while being unloaded from the railroad cars at the Brighton abattoir.

SHE SAID THEY LIED.

Then Cannon and Spencer Were Given 60 and 30 Days.

There was a sensational incident in the municipal court Monday morning when George Spencer and Peter M. Cannon of 12 Chandler place, Newton Upper Falls, who were arraigned for drunkenness, were accused by Mrs. Mary Caverly of Newton Upper Falls of assault and battery upon her.

Called to the witness stand, the men accused Mrs. Caverly of having been intoxicated herself at the time and of having sold them the liquor of which they inebriated too freely.

The woman was called to the stand to tell her story. She started to tell how the men had hit her, when the two defendants stood up in the dock and objected to the story.

Mrs. Caverly, in turn, called them both liars. She was taken off the witness stand, and Judge Kennedy sentenced Cannon to 60 days in the house of correction and Spencer to 30 days in the same institution. Cannon has been arraigned in court here nine times.

HE WILL KEEP AWAY NOW.

Driscoll Offered to and will be Gone Four Months.

When John Driscoll of Newton Highlands was arraigned in the municipal court Monday morning on a charge of drunkenness his wife appeared and accused him of having abused their little boy and herself.

Mrs. Driscoll was asked to tell her story. She asserted that Driscoll came home intoxicated a few nights ago and started to chase his little son with a hammer and made efforts to hit him. Mrs. Driscoll said she and the little boy ran into another room and locked themselves in.

"Then my husband went out and beat our horse with a big stick," she added. She asserted he had been drinking heavily ever since last Christmas.

Driscoll offered the suggestion that he was willing to keep away from his wife if the court wanted him to do so.

"I guess you will all right," commented Judge Kennedy, who sentenced him to four months in the house of correction.

BOYS STOLE FIREWORKS.

Saw Some in Shed and Could not Resist the Temptation.

Charged with stealing fireworks at Newton Upper Falls, three boys were arraigned before Judge Kennedy in a private session of the municipal court Saturday morning. The lads were Barnard M. Sharpe, 16 years old, of Highlandville; James Heald, 15, of Central avenue, Needham; and Patrick Green, 15, of 347 Elliot street, Newton Upper Falls. They were convicted of the larceny of fireworks belonging to the Marston & Wells company from an express wagon while the vehicle was standing in a shed at the Upper Falls. The case of Sharpe was continued to November 10, while those of Heald and Green were placed on file.

ALDEN-COPPINS.

Newton Couple Married Saturday—at Home on New Years.

The quiet home wedding of two well known Newton residents took place at noon Saturday, when Miss Caroline Isabel Coppins became the bride of Mr. John Trott Alden. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Coppins of 567 Centre street. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor of Channing Unitarian church.

The bride was gowned in lace applique. She was unattended, as was also the groom, there being no bridesmaids, best man or ushers. Master Arnold Coppins Barker and Robert Loring Coppins, nephews of the bride, acted as flower boys. Dressed all in white they preceded Mr. and Miss Coppins, making a pretty feature of the ceremony.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the residence. Mr. and Mrs. George T. Coppins and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Alden assisted in receiving the many guests. The residence was tastefully decorated with white and pink flowers, with palms and vines forming a green background.

Mr. Alden is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Endicott Alden of 547 Centre street. After an extended trip Mr. and Mrs. Alden will be at home to their many friends on New Year's night.

SMITH-JOYCE.

Watertown Fireman Takes a Bride in Newton.

The wedding of Miss Annie Joyce, daughter of Mrs. John Joyce of Thornton street, and Mr. Charles E. Smith, a popular Watertown fireman, son of Mrs. James Smith of Mt. Auburn street, that town, took place Sunday afternoon. The ceremony was performed at 4:30 o'clock at the parochial residence of the Church of Our Lady by Rev. Fr. James Kelly, assistant pastor.

The bride wore a gown of grey voile over silk, trimmed with point lace. She was attended by Miss Delia Joyce, who was gowned in fawn voile over silk. The best man was Mr. Thomas Smith.

Many handsome presents were received from numerous friends in Newton and Watertown. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside on Morse street.

BITTEN BY DOGS.

Auburndale Letter Carrier Attacked on Street.

While delivering mail at Auburndale Monday afternoon, Letter Carrier Thomas E. Jones of the Auburndale postal station was attacked by two dogs owned by Mr. N. E. Dewing of 14 Oakland avenue, Auburndale. Mr. Jones was severely bitten before he was able to shake off the animals. He resides at 110 Auburn street, and is well known in that section of the city.

RAIN PUT OUT LIGHT

Then Trouble Came to Green's Auto

Came Back to See if "Cop" Really Wanted Him

An unusual automobile case was tried in the municipal court Monday morning, when Guy M. Green, an employee of an automobile manufacturing concern in Waltham, was arraigned on charges of running his machine at night without lights and of failing to stop when signalled by a patrolman.

Green pleaded guilty to the first charge and not guilty to failing to stop, claiming that he did not know the policeman had tried to stop him.

Patrolman Allen testified that Green and a companion passed Grove and Washington streets, Newton Lower Falls, at about midnight a few nights ago without lights. The patrolman said the machine did not stop when he went into the street to signal it.

Green took the stand. He testified he had gone to Needham that afternoon to test the machine, which was a 1907 model. It broke down and a brisk shower came up. He procured an old fashioned kerosene oil lantern, but the rain put out the light several times. His companion, he said, thought afterward that the policeman might have signalled to them. After passing a little way up Grove street they talked it over and decided to return to see if the policeman really did want them. Then they borrowed a knife and repaired the lantern, which burned all right after that.

Judge Kennedy said that Green could have either left the automobile by the roadside or taken it home for repairs. He thought the better way was to have taken it home. He added that he was inclined to believe the young man's story, when he asserted he did not know whether the policeman really wanted him to stop. The fact that he did return to find out if he was wanted was in his favor, said the judge.

Green was found guilty of running the machine without proper lights and the case was placed on file. On the other charge he was found not guilty and ordered discharged.

Midsummer politics centers around the apportionment for representatives, and the position taken last week
in these columns has been generally endorsed by Newton citizens. The County Commissioners are quoted, however, as saying that the proposition is "impossible". The dictionary defines "impossible" as "incapable of being done" and that hardly describes the situation as it exists in the southwestern portion of Middlesex County. "Residentitis" would better define the reason for the position taken by our worthy county commissioners, for if the truth was known, the fact that one of the commissioners is a citizen of Natick, probably accounts for the action to be taken next week.

The proposed plan allows a representative to four towns which at present are nearly 750 short of the average constituency and from the census figures are growing smaller rather than larger.
The valuation of these towns barely exceeds five millions and they have a total population of about eight thousand. For at least two years of the coming decade,
these towns will have exactly half as many representatives at the State House
as Newton, with its sixty-five millions of valuation and nearly thirty-seven thousand population. The unfairness of the apportionment when viewed in the light of these figures is clear, and the "impossibleness" appears to be in the position taken by the County commissioners rather than in the plan proposed by the GRAPHIC. Propinquity is a stronger argument at East Cambridge apparently than justice, and the decadent towns have a greater influence than the growing cities.

The decision of the judge of the Lynn municipal court that information given by automobilists when stopped by the police renders them immune from prosecution, will compel the officers to arrest
every offender and take them to the police station. Let the good work go on.
Imprisonment is the only remedy for this class of offenders.

Mayor Warren's selection of architects for the new school houses is excellent and some good plans may be expected in the competitions. The mayor has not exercised his full authority to select five for each school, but the quality
makes up for the lack in numbers.

John Kenney, who asserted that Henley wrestled with him when he demanded his tax money.

Henley said that the constable knocked him over and sat on him, then putting handcuffs on his wrists. Then, he testified, when he offered to pay up the constable took off the handcuffs and released him. He declared that Kenney clubbed him.

The constable admitted that he tapped
Henley on the head and then threw him down. Both men had counsel.

Henley said he was employed by W.
H. Mague, a West Newton contractor, and received $10.50 a week, $2 of which is deducted by his employer each week for house rent. He has a wife and four children.

ICE MAN GOT MAD Chased Expressman and Pulled His Hair

Denied he Had an Ice Pick but Said It Was an Axe

Convicted of assault and battery upon Charles Quinn, 21 years old, a Newton
teamster, Christopher O'Brien, driver
for the Independent Ice Co., was fined $15 in court Tuesday.

Quinn testified that he was loading butter ferkins in the rear of the store of
P. A. Yerxa on Watertown street, near Crafts, July 17, when O'Brien drove his ice wagon between the express wagon and a bulkhead. An altercation ensued and Quinn charged O'Brien with chasing him with an ice pick and throwing
him on the ground and pulling his hair.
Thomas Murray and others testified that they pulled the two men apart.

When O'Brien was called to tell his story he said that Quinn had threatened to wipe up the ground with him because he drove in his team. He asserted that none of the witnesses knew what an ice
pick was and that he never carried one.
He admitted he had an axe in his hand
when he chased Quinn.

O'Brien appealed the fine of $15 and he was ordered held in $300 for the superior court. At the adjournment of court he decided to withdraw the appeal. He was given until Thursday to pay the fine and he started home after the money.

SHOOK 8 YEAR OLD BOY

Then West Newton Man Paid $5 For the Liberty

Jeremiah O'Brien of West Newton
was arraigned in court Tuesday on a charge of assault, and battery upon Francis Guzzi, the 8-year old son of Dominico Guzzi, an Oak Avenue grocer.
After a lengthy trial he was found guilty
and fined $5.

The little boy was put on the stand.
He said he attended the Franklin school and was in the fourth grade. He said that Saturday morning Jeremiah O'Brien, Jr., 8 years old, hit him in the back with a stone. The O'Brien boy's father then chased him into the yard of Mrs. John Ganley and kicked him in the stomach, the boy asserted.

"Were you standing up or lying down
when I kicked you?" broke in O'Brien.
"I had been lying down about four minutes," promptly answered the little Guzzi boy.

Mrs. Ganley testified to hearing the boy screaming and upon going out of the house finding him lying in the grass.
She said she saw O'Brien go out of the yard a few minutes later. Miss Theresa Guzzi, sister of the boy, testified that boys had to bring her little brother home. She sent for Dr. Putman.

O'Brien then took the stand. He testified that his own boy told him Francis had hit him with a horsewhip. He admitted chasing the Guzzi boy into the Ganley yard and shaking him three or four times. He left the boy lying in the grass. He asserted that Francis and three other lads teased him almost daily.

Was on Wrong Side

Ernest Holton of Boston was fined $5
here Wednesday for driving an automobile on the wrong side of Commonwealth Avenue.

IN THE ALTOGETHER
No Longer Can Youths
Bathe That Way

Residents Object and Police Will "Shoo" Them Off

Because boys and young men are said
to have made themselves objectionable while bathing in the ponds about Chestnut Hill and in other parts of this city,
many complaints having been received from residents, Chief of Police Mitchell has had signs posted prohibiting bathing in many of the ponds.

Early in the summer there was considerable complaint among the residents of Lake Avenue and other streets bordering Crystal Lake, Newton Centre, that boys bathed in the lake without suits. This practice has been stopped and it is stated that there is now no complaint on this score in that vicinity.

Boys will now have to find new swimming pools or patronize those sections of the Charles river reserved for bathing.

DOG KEPT BARKING

Reason Was Because it Hadn't Been Killed as Ordered

Jeremiah Buckley appeared in the local court again Saturday morning on a continued case in which he was charged with keeping a barking dog. He asserted that he had disposed of the animal since last appearing in court. Patrolman O'Halloran testified that he had seen the dog in Buckley's yard only a week before and that it had bothered neighbors since the owner had been ordered to dispose of it. A neighbor testified that Buckley had told him that as he had paid for a license he was going to keep the dog anyway. He was fined $5. He appealed and was held in $100 for the superior court. When court adjourned Buckley withdrew his appeal.

MR. AND MRS. BARTLETT SAIL

Will Remain in Europe Till Early Autumn.

Gen. and Mrs. Charles W. Bartlett,
who moved to Mill street, Newtonville,
last winter, sailed yesterday for Europe.
They will remain abroad until early autumn and will travel over various sections of the western part of the continent.

Gen. and Mrs. Bartlett moved to this city from Dorchester, where they resided for a number of years.

ROSALIND HARWOOD DAY.

Monday at Floating Hospital was in

One of the most enjoyable days in several weeks for the little folk on the Boston Floating Hospital took place Monday. The day was of especial interest to Newton residents, it being Rosalind Harwood day in memory of the little daughter of Mr. Sydney Harwood of Waverly Avenue who died several years ago.

GAELIC FOOTBALL

One Feature of Working
Boys' Home Party

Event on Cedar St. Grounds
Tomorrow the "Best Ever"

Attractive features will mark the annual lawn party of the Working Boys' Home Industrial School which will take place tomorrow afternoon and evening on the Newton A. A. grounds at Newton Centre. The Ladies' Aid Society will have charge of the event, assisted by prominent men of the Newtons, the local courts of Foresters, divisions of the
A. O. H., and the Ladies' Catholic Union
of Charlestown.

A pleasing program beginning with band concerts at 1.30 and closing with a vaudeville program and dancing late in the evening will be given. The industrial school is situated off Winchester street, Newton Highlands, and depends principally upon the public for its maintenance. At present it has 160 boys, a large number of whom are orphans.
Rev. Fr. William H. McDonough is the superintendent and the boys are taught under the direction of competent instructors so that they may be sent out into the world fully equipped to earn their own livelihoods.

There will be a series of athletic games for boys and girls in the early afternoon, in which valuable prizes will be awarded. Throughout the afternoon a Punch and Judy show will be provided for the little ones.

A baseball game between the Water-towns and the Newton Upper Falls will decide the championship of these teams.
The former strong all-Newton team has been disbanded and many of the old players will be represented on the Upper Falls team. "Tom" McCarty, formerly of the Boston Americans, has agreed to umpire the contest.

Another athletic feature which will attract no little attention will be a Gaelic football game. This will be played at 5 o'clock. It will be the first time that a game of Gaelic football will have been played by organized teams in this city.

For the mothers there will be a baby show. Gold prizes will be awarded the prettiest boy and girl under two years of age. The prizes have been given by John Flood of Newton.

The vaudeville program will be in charge of a committee headed by James R. Condrin of West Newton. Mr. Con-drin has been prominently identified with local Catholic dramatics and last spring
"The Broken Bowspit," a play written by him, was presented by West Newton talent.

Through the courtesy of Col. Roger Scannell, the Irish goat recently brought from Kerry will be placed on exhibition.
The goat will be in charge of P. A. Murray, Richard Lyons and Thomas J.
Lyons.

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, for many years a friend of the home, will attend.
This will be the first affair of the kind
which he will have attended in Newton.
Mayor Warren of Newton will be unable to be present owing to the fact that he will be out of town on a vacation, but the city government will be represented
by Aldermen William Doherty of Nonantum and Thomas W. White of Newton Upper Falls. "Mike" Mitchell, purchasing agent of Boston, will chaperone
the members of the Ladies Catholic Union
of Charlestown.

Frank A. Hurley of Newton Centre is chairman of the general committee of arrangements.

Norumbega Park.—Norumbega Park
has a strong hold on the summer amusement seekers of Boston and nearby cities and towns and the steadily increasing patronage there in all kinds of summer weather, and in spite of the new attractions that spring up, is born of the well established confidence in the management. Their aim has always been to hold their patrons week after week
through the season and season after season, by trying to please them. A commodious restaurant overlooking the park and the beautiful Charles on one side and the picturesque boulevard on the other with the restaurant orchestra concerts on the veranda, always maintains a cuisine on a par with that of any city hotel. The Norumbega boat house has the most picturesque location on the Charles and its canoe service is the largest and best on the river. There is nothing this side of New York to compare with its zoological garden and the electric fountain is not rivaled by any park in the country and as for the park itself, it is a veritable woodland dream.

A great feature of Norumbega Park,
that is most powerful in attracting crowds there is the grand covered open air theatre with its excellent vaudeville programmes every afternoon and evening. For the past two weeks very excellent vaudeville programmes have been provided that have been well balanced in every particular. The coming week
there will be an entire change of programme that will rival these for entertaining qualities.

ORANGE JELLY.

Cut thin slices from the middle of three or four oranges and remove yellow and white rind. Lay some of the pieces in the bottom of a mold.

For a small mold soak one-quarter box of gelatine in one-quarter cup of cold water for one-half hour, pour on one-half cup of boiling water to dissolve
it thoroughly, then add one cup of orange juice, two tablespoons of lemon juice and one-half cup of sugar. Pour enough jelly into the mold to cover the pieces of orange and let it become firm then arrange half slices round the sides of the mold, turn in a little more jelly but not enough to float them.
When the half slices are firmly fixed in place turn in the remainder of the jelly. To unmold dip the mold into hot water for a few seconds, but if the mold is a plain one, or so smooth that its contents slip out easily, do not try the hot water.

After buying a handsome mold it is sometimes found to have a rough place or projecting edge that will break the jelly; in that case dipping in hot water will ensure an unbroken form.

Garnish the orange jelly with candied orange peel or green leaves. Never use parsley as a garnish for sweets; it belongs to meats and fish.

CLAFLIN GUARD NOTES.

One more week and the Claflin Guard will have started on their long anticipated "Trip to Ottawa." The boys have worked hard on close order drill and expect to hold their own without any trouble, and represent the city of Newton in a creditable manner.

Last Monday evening was given over to Guard Duty mainly and the results were very satisfactory. The Posting of Reliefs was perfect and speaks well for the theoretical instruction which the corporals have undergone.

Qm. Sergt. Barrows for over thirty years an active member of the Claflin Guard has found it necessary on account of business reasons, to request his discharge, and Capt. Guilford has applied for the same. It is with regrets that we see Sergt. Barrows sever his connections as an active member, but as he will still continue to discharge the functions of janitor at the armory he will not be lost to view, but will still continue to serve the city as faithfully in the future as he has in the past.

The vacancy so caused will be filled by the promotion of Sergt. Johnson to Qm. Sergt., Corp. Greene to Sergt. and Priv. Edward A. Greenwood to Corporal.

White-Ambrose

Dr. William T. White of Walnut street, Newtonville, and Miss Mary M. Ambrose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Ambrose of North Ferrisburg, Vt., were married Saturday at that place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Arthur B. Potter of that town. Dr. and Mrs. White will reside in Newtonville after a trip.

ABOUT TOWN

The managing editor of a magazine who lives in this city found an engraved card in his mail a few days ago. It looked like an invitation to some sort of a function and he was surprised when he read:

Mr. John Smith, having severed his connection with the So and So Magazine, is now open to engagement from any high class magazine or newspaper.

"It is a wonder," commented the high-brow to whom it was sent, "that he did not put R. S. V. P. on it."

A Newton Centre woman a fortnight ago employed a new maid, who had just come to this country from her native Sweden. Knowing English only slightly she had much difficulty in comprehending questions put to her.

"She took a great liking to certain words," commented her employer the other day. "When she heard a word which sounded nice to her she would use it upon every occasion. One of them which seemed to especially strike her fancy was the word probably."

"We were baking bread yesterday. I happened to go through the kitchen when I thought I smelled something burning. 'The bread isn't burning, is it?' I asked."

The new maid looked at me in surprise, doubtless not comprehending my question.

"Why, probably," she answered.

Has not Newton missed something good by never having seen its way clear to have an old-home week? Her sons and daughters are widely scattered throughout the country, but a big reunion might be a success at almost any season.

A man went into a Newton Highlands store the other day and bought 46 cents worth of lamp chimneys. As he came out he dropped the bundle and broke just half of them. That made it 23 for him.

With Alderman Doherty at the helm the Nonantum Improvement Society ought to have fair sailing.

CITY HALL NOTES

Decrease in the Death Rate—Mayor Warren Away

The health department reports that there were 25 deaths in this city during the month of July. This is a decided decrease over last year, when in the corresponding month there were no less than 57 deaths.

Mayor Warren has invited the following architects to submit plans for the new school houses to be erected this fall. Nonantum.—George F. Newton, MacFarland, Colby and MacFarland, Brainerd and Leeds, and Frost, Briggs and Chamberlain, the latter firm being of Worcester. For the Hyde school, the architects are Hartwell, Richardson and Driver, Samuel J. Brown, Coolidge and Carlson, and W. C. Brocklesby, the last being of Hartford, Conn. The mayor has only selected four architects in each case and has followed the desire of the aldermen in selecting at least one firm in each competition from outside the vicinity of Boston.

The tax rate is expected next week.

Auburndale Woman Wedded to a Boston Man

Mrs. Laura M. Eckley of Oak Ridge road, Auburndale, and Mr. James I. Wingate of Boston were married last week at Brookline by Rev. George L. Perrin of that town. The bride is well known in Auburndale and has lived for a number of years there.

The groom is 69 years of age. He makes his home at the Hotel Garrison, Boston. He was born in Gorham. It is expected that after a trip Mr. and Mrs. Wingate will reside in Auburndale.

Where Comfort is King.

Camping out is becoming a very popular way in which to spend one's vacation of the summer and on the shores of Lake Champlain in Vermont are a score of established camps where canvas homes give shelter during the summer months to hundreds of camping enthusiasts. At some points picturesque cottages of wood and stone are taking the place of the canvas houses, yet the tent will always be a popular home for those who love the life in the open. For the summer camper out there certainly is no locality more desirable from every point of view than the Vermont shores and the islands of Lake Champlain. In this region, which is a paradise for those who love to fish and hunt and camp, one may rent a camp complete or rear his own canvas home and live happily until snow flies where "style is dead and comfort's king." With boating, bathing, fishing—there are plenty of perch, pike, pickerel and black bass in Champlain—driving or automobile on the hard beach roads, one can pass a most de-

Castle Square Theatre.—No operas are more popular than the good old operas of long ago. Of these one of the most familiar and best is "Martha," and it combines all the characteristics of grand and comic opera. Its music is brilliant and filled with a constant succession of beautiful melodies, and its plot and situations are alternately serious in their romance and rollickingly humorous in their comedy, "Martha" has never grown old, despite the fact that it has been sung ten thousand times to the audiences of this and preceding generations, and even in this modern day of novelty and twentieth century excitement, it is as much admired and applauded as at its first production. One of its greatest claims upon fame is the fact that the song that has thrilled every heart, "The Last Rose of Summer," is but one of many of the numerous solos that are sung by the heroine and the characters that surround her.

When "Martha" is produced at the Castle Square Theatre next week it will have every advantage of a cast that will introduce all the leading favorites to the summer opera company. In the title role, Miss Mary Carrington will be again warmly received, Harry Luckstone will appear as Plunkett, and the other leading roles will be sung by Mr. Tallman, Mr. Shields, Miss Lass and Miss Gardner.

Congressman Weeks will get the glad hand at Medway on Monday, all right.

And now how would you like to be the iceman?

Only four more Saturday half-holidays.

It was a South Shore newspaper which the other day announced that Mr. Name-notioned here was "summering in Hull."

WHIST A PUZZLE

Even the Expert Has Anxious Moments

Trump Attack Sometimes an Advisable Method

There seems to be no situation fraught with more difficulties for whist players, experts as well as novices, than that which arises when the leader must decide whether to continue with winning cards of an established suit, thus forcing one of his opponents, or to start a new suit of secondary importance, in cases where his trump strength is insufficient to justify a trump attack. If he can feel sure that his winning card will draw a trump from the opponent who is strong in trumps, his course is plainly marked out for him, and he will cheerfully lead another round of his established suit, knowing that every force administered to a strong adverse hand will, subject to certain qualifications, postpone and retard the bringing in of adverse strong suits. This much is book whist; but he will seldom find himself possessed of such important information when called upon to meet these situations, as neither opponent may have called for trumps, or have indicated, by passing a doubtful trick, a strong trump holding. For the purposes of this discussion, it will be assumed that neither the leader's partner nor his adversaries have, in any manner, given indication of trump strength, or a desire to have them led, and that force, if administered, will be wholly without knowledge as to whether it will permit the weaker opponent to count a losing trump, or inflict damage on the one who is strong. This is the aspect that such situations most usually assume, if they are considered troublesome, and on which it is desired to throw some light.

"If the holder of an established suit finds the balance of his hand too weak to justify a trump attack, he is weak enough to force an opponent," someone has so truly said, that the saying has grown to be almost axiomatic, and this principle has found its way honestly into a large majority of rational systems of play. I class it as one of the essential principles that a sound long-suit system should contain; not that the expert player would hesitate to avail himself of it, regardless of system requirements, in most cases, but because experience has demonstrated that with this theory, as well as with many others that depend for their results upon the known probabilities, the practice must be uniform and invariable if the best results are to be obtained, rather than left to the player's impulse at the moment when the necessity of arriving at a decision is upon him. It has been found that forcing opponents with winning cards of an established suit, when lacking sufficient strength to lead trumps for its protection—even forcing at random, as must frequently happen—will gain more tricks than it will lose, in the long run, and that it is infinitely better practice than opening another suit—especially at random. It is fair to presume that if either of the opponents has a long suit of trumps, he is the one most apt to be short in your long suit, and while it does not always follow, its recurrence is of such more than average frequency as to furnish a stout peg upon which to hang the reason for the play.

It is a very generally conceded fact that a trump attack is wise when an established suit, four or more trumps, and a card of re-entry are all fortunately combined in the leader's hand, and even short leads of trumps, when the plain-suit strength of the hand is almost invincibly great will often result fortunately. But there is no play that will prove as invariably trick-losing as that of making short trump leads for the protection of the strong or even established suit, when the other plain suits are comparatively weak. It is just with such holdings that a player must rely on the doctrine of probabilities and proceed to force whichever opponent he may, trusting to inflict injury to adverse strength, or at least to place the lead advantageously. Close attention to the fall of the cards is, of course, essential lest both opponents be void of the suit in question, for to permit one to trump while the other discards would render a combination unpossessible. It is very important to know, on the completion of the second round of one's suit, exactly what small cards, if any, have not been played. If partner may be depended upon to uniformly make the unblocking play, retaining the lowest card of your suit whenever he holds more than three, you will usually be able to read, after two rounds, that he holds either all the remaining cards of your established suit, or all but one, and you can thus tell whether a third round is advisable. In the former case an immediate continuation is out of the question, no matter how impracticable the opening of a new suit may appear. But if you can read that one adversary will follow, the third round offers the safest and most conservative way out of a situation beset with difficulties. It will prove, especially fortunate if partner happens to hold just four trumps, and you succeed in forcing an opponent who also holds four, as the former will be thereby advanced from a position of equality to one of superiority, and nearly all the large swings that occur in deals where the opposing trump strength is thus delicately balanced, depend upon which of the strong hands is subjected to the first force. The same may be said of a trump distribution which has given one adversary four and each of the other players three trumps—if the first force be administered to the one so favored, it is apt to prove a home thrust. I recall a case in point that occurred during the play of one of the Hamilton trophy matches at the last congress. The original leader picked up this hand:

Spades—A, K, J, 5, 2.
Hearts—9, 3.
Clubs—K (trumps).
Diamonds—Q, J, 6, 3.

At both tables the Ace of Spades was opened, the Queen falling from fourth hand. The continuation differed, one player leading the Jack of Spades, put a force on the only hand around the table that contained four trumps, while the other switched to his secondary suit of Diamonds, and lost two tricks by the operation. It so happened that fourth hand held an invincible Heart suit and four trumps, which he would have led with happy results had he not been forced. At the table where the suit was changed, he obtained the lead without the loss of a trump, and naturally bought in his entire raft of Hearts. Many other cases might be cited where the forcing play, from hands above general character, turned out better than changing suits.

To be carefully distinguished from situations like the above are those arising where one opponent has shown an established suit for the protection of which his partner is leading trumps from a holding to great to be broken down. The leader, if so fortunate as to interrupt the progress of his trump extraction, must consider carefully whether it will be wise to continue his established suit, when the force cannot injure the trump-leading adversary, rather than run with the unopened suit, and take in whatever tricks partner and he may be entitled to in that before the discarding process begins. In other words, it is important for a whist player to be able to recognize when "Ace time" has arrived and to act upon that knowledge. Forcing opponents is ordinarily one of the most effective defensive plays that a weak hand can resort to, but the time will occasionally arrive when the adverse strength is too great for its advance to be arrested by small obstacles, and when it becomes apparent that you cannot stem the tide, convert all your available assets into tricks and stand out of its path, lest you be swept away in the general flood.—Beverly W. Smith.

To lead from a four-card suit originally, especially when the hand is of more than average strength, is rarely a satisfactory proceeding. Four-card suits are practically only of average length, and are very apt to encounter equally long and perhaps stronger holdings. They are better adapted to defence than attack. If the suit requires establishment, there will generally be little to be made after that condition is attained. If it is headed by high cards there will not probably be any loss incurred by waiting to have it led up to. Should it contain any combination of honors other than a head sequence there will be a probability of gain by refraining from opening it. Very frequently the high cards of a four-card suit can be made much more effective by retaining them for recentries than by making immediate tricks with them. When as will not infrequently happen, five cards of the suit are held in an adverse hand, you will expedite their establishment by opening your four-card holding, whilst by withholding it, you must retard or prevent that establishment.

Supposing your suit to consist of Ace, King, 6, 2, you are equally likely to make your honors, whether you lead them or not, and if you refrain, the lead may come from your left-hand opponent and bring down an honor in his partner's hand to your King. If in addition to the head sequence mentioned in the suit contains a finessing card such as Jack or 10, there is less danger of your losing the command by opening it, but even then it is well, especially if you are strong in trumps, to stop the suit after having played the King, and allow your partner to lead it through. The practicability of such plays depends of course upon an understanding between partners of each other's methods. If you play the rigid long suit game you cannot have much latitude in choice of openings, and for the sake of uniformity and the preservation of your mutual content, must often make your original opening from four-card suits when your hand contains a desirable alternative.

In such hands as the following, diamonds being trumps, a thoughtful player would have no doubt as to the best lead. Most beginners, however, would jump at the two apparently sure tricks in hearts, thereby weakening the hand by exhausting the re-entries and very likely destroying all chance of bringing in the clubs, an otherwise not improbable consummation: Spades, 9; hearts, A, K, 5, 2; clubs, 10, 9, 8, 7; diamonds, K, Q, 9.

To open a four-card suit which contains no honor is the weakest kind of play, and it is mitigated little if at all by leading its head first. To open a four-card suit with a single honor, except the Ace, is only a degree less reprehensible. Such a suit, the customary nomenclature notwithstanding, is weak, and to lead it is, although in accordance with orthodox rule, a violation of the long-suit principle, which condemns the lead of short suits. That condemnation ought to apply with greater force, for in the short suits you may have no stopper, but with an honor and three cards you have a sure defence, and your partner may have—an even distribution he should have—another honor. By leading the suit you may kill a single honor in his hand, a misfortune which he will in all probability enhance by returning the lead to you with a similar result. In order to avoid the opening from long weak suits, many of the advanced players are now adapting their game so as to admit of an alternative short-suit lead, and there is every indication that the practice will receive general acceptance in time.—Lennard Leigh.

Truth About Advertising.

After all is said that can be said it must be admitted that advertising as an exact science has not been and never will be clearly defined in all details. The editorial writer, the public speaker, the attorney before a jury, are all apt to make a pronounced failure at times when they try hardest to win. There is always the danger of overconfidence to be avoided as well as of being misunderstood, and about the time one thinks he "knows it all" he finds himself talking over the heads of the people.

Every successful storekeeper is a student of human nature. No matter how great may be his ability to string together a lot of fine words or how much he may like to "spread himself," unless he is very careful he is apt to be laughed at for his pains. He must know his people better than his stock of merchandise, avoid silly sentiment, both in his salesmanship behind the counter and through his advertising space, and in every way act the observing, broad minded, tactful seeker after business.

Every advertiser should try to size up results, direct and indirect, and to recognize them when he sees them. In case they do not appear try to find the cause, for there is one. Probably it is with the advertiser or his store. It is all wrong to expect a rush for the store as soon as the paper comes out, though this actually happens at times, for results are the more likely to come slowly, after a digestion of what you have had to say, and it is also wrong to decide that the benefit derived from one ad. ends with that one particular case. The results of a single lucky hit are apt to be felt a long time, especially when it draws new customers. He should keep an eye on the efforts of his competitors, but always avoid stealing their ideas and never indulge in "cuts" and personalities, especially through the press. There is nothing which magnifies the smallness of a man, his ignorance and ill nature, as much as "talking back" in a public way, and it almost always reacts on the one who practices it. Advertise your own business and let the other fellows alone.

A good weekly journal devoted to the subject of advertising would be a profitable investment for advertisement writers who desire to keep up to date and who are not running over with inspirations. The next best idea along the same line is to make a study of the advertisements written by the high priced men of the leading great department stores, for while their productions could not and should not be used bodily, their style and general makeup not only suggest thoughts for local use, but also give the buyer ideas which he can oftentimes profitably adopt.

Finally, the importance of the right sort of advertising should not be underestimated. It is a prime necessity to any modern, properly conducted business, as important as right buying and intelligent salesmanship, and it has been the sole purpose of these articles to emphasize that one fact, about which many ideas naturally cluster. When one advertises simply because somebody else does or because it is good business form to do so and with but half confidence in the act, he can rest assured that he is not getting the returns that he anticipates—not more than half. But when he makes up his mind that his payments to the printer do not represent merely an expense—an incumbrance—on his business and goes at the preparation of his ads. with as much interest as when he buys and sells his stock, he is on the sure road to make his advertising a profitable feature of his business—an indispensable help.—Taneytown (Md.) Record.

Recreation for August.

One of the most interesting articles of the month is "Aeronautics in America," by Capt. Homer W. Hedge, founder and President of the Aero Club of America, in this magazine. It reveals a surprising thing, in that ballooning has now a considerable vogue among the rich in this country as a recreation, and the conclusions of the author concerning the future of aeronautics carry certainly more significance than recent articles on the same subject by popular magazine contributors. There are illustrations of dirigible balloons and aeroplanes, from photographs. "Battling the Wilderness," by Ernest Russell, is another excellent illustrated article in the same magazine. It tells where and how the settler's battle with the wilderness is still going on on this continent, and graphically delineates the primitive life of a real pioneer family in the bush beyond the frontier. In his article "Gen. Zebulon Pike, Explorer," Eugene Parsons makes an admirable plea for more general recognition of the many valuable services rendered by Pike's Peak. He shows that Pike was more than a mere soldier of fortune, and the finding of the mountain which bears his name but one of the least of his achievements. The article is illustrated with a portrait of the explorer and a view of the famous peak. "The Revival of Archery," by Cora Moore, is a handsomely illustrated article which tells how to become a good bowman, and other "how to" articles are "How to Learn to Swim," (with illustrations), by Holf Wishy; "The Art of Camping," by Charles A. Bramble, and "The Best of Bait-Fishing," by S. L. Kilmer. Two nicely written narratives of general appeal are "A Vacation in a Wagon," by Mary K. Maule, and "Something about Grebes," by Lottie J. Carroll. Of special interest to sportsmen are "Prospecting for Woodcock," by Dr. George McAleer; "On St. Patrick's Marshes" (a story of caribou hunting), by Sid Howard; "Indians as Guides," by John Boyd; "Hunting the Pronghorn," by Everett Dufour, and "Hunting Western Caribou," by R. E. Godfrey. Other articles are "The Test of Cruising Power Boats," by E. L. Ferguson, and "The Season in Amateur Athletics," by Milton E. Towne. The editorials are especially good.

"You can please all of the people some of the time, some of the people all of the time, but you'll have a devil's own time trying to please all the people all the time."

ROMANCE SPOILED

Original Summer Girl
Lost Young ManShe Says all Because Graphic Prints Bride's Age

From Christmas Cove, the famous summer resort where so many romances have had their beginning, comes a complaint to this office that by its custom of printing the ages of brides who slip away to various places to be married, THE GRAPHIC has spoiled another pretty romance.

The complaint is made by a maiden who signs herself "The Original Summer-maid."

Some Pertinent Questions

Editor of THE GRAPHIC.

Why has THE GRAPHIC changed its past policy in reporting weddings by printing the age of the bride?

Is it not enough even to report the quiet weddings when any Newton young people slip away to Providence or some other Gretna Green and are married?

In the more conventional weddings you do not print the age of the bride, or even tell if it happens to be the first, second or third match. Why not?

Isn't what is fair to one fair for another?

Just let me show you what you have caused by this practice in just this one instance. I live in one of the prettiest villages of Newton—I will not say which one—and the first of July I came to this resort—Christmas Cove—for the season. At the dance Fourth of July evening I met a real entertaining young man. He was good looking and I invited him to call to see me the next day. He did, and we became fast friends. The middle of July we became engaged. We have been thinking seriously of taking a run down to Providence when we came back to Boston in September and being quietly married. He has another year in college and for that reason his parents object to his being married this year.

Last week I was reading a GRAPHIC on the beach when he came down the shore and sat beside me. When he saw that your paper prints the ages of brides he declared he would not marry me until I moved away from Newton. It was just because he did not want to see my age compared with his in the GRAPHIC that he was led to come to this conclusion.

I will venture that I am not the only young woman whose romance you have spoiled by your custom of printing the ages of the bride in your accounts of weddings to which all the relatives and friends of the contracting persons are not bidden.

Why don't you mend your ways?
THE ORIGINAL SUMMER GIRL.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre.—The vaudeville program at Keith's for the week of August 6 is a typical summer one, up to the standard of this popular place of amusement. The Zingari troupe, claimed to be one of the best mixed organizations of vocalists ever heard in the varieties, will be one of the leading features of the bill. They present an excellent interpretation of gypsy life with special scenery and handsome costumes, there are eight people in the act, five men and three women, all of whom are excellent vocalists. This will be the first appearance of the troupe in Boston. Estelle Wordette, assisted by an excellent company will present the delightful one-act playlet, "A Honeymoon in the Catskills," which has been scoring a big hit in the other theatres on the Keith circuit. This will also be its first appearance in Boston. The surrounding show contains several newcomers, as well as others favorably known hereabouts. Included in the list will be the Four Everettes, equally divided as to sex, in a new and novel equilibristic exhibition; Clifford and Burke, popular blackface comedians and eccentric dancers; John D. Gilbert, monologue and singing comedian; Donat Bedini, a clever acrobat, exhibiting an equally clever canine; Dixon and Anger, "The Baron and His Friend"; Ben Beyer comedy bicyclist; Billy Broad, blackface comedian; Malverne and Thomas, pleasing singers and dancers; and Morton, Temple and Morton, in an acrobatic specialty. As usual, the Fallettes, whose popularity seems not to have abated a single jot, will have an entire new program of selections, and the customary new list of comedy and interesting motion pictures will be exhibited in the kinetograph.

Grand Opera House.—A. H. Woods' new melodrama, "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," will have its first presentation in Boston at the Grand Opera House Saturday evening, August 4, and continuing next week. The story takes place in New York City and extends over four acts and twelve scenes, among the more prominent being, The Grand Central Station; Central Park; The Tenement District; The "Sweat-Shop";

The Egyptian Chamber; The Motor Boat Chase on the Hudson; The Engine House; The Bertillon Room at The Tombs and The Court Room. Two caravans of special scenery and mechanical effects are carried, and the equipment includes; a real Fire Engine; Two Automobiles; a Motor Boat; a Motor Cycle and three horses. Several sewing machines will be given away during this engagement, of which full particulars will be given later. This will be the beginning of the 20th season at the Grand Opera House. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Capt. Weeks' Gift.

McLean & Wright, Boston architects, have designed a handsome library building, to be called the William D. Weeks Memorial, which will be built in Lancaster, N. H., by Congressman John W. Weeks in memory of his father, whose family has long been identified with the affairs of Lancaster. It will be located to the left of Centennial Common on Main street.

The building is of a classical design. The material used is to be limestone and Roman brick.

The vestibule leads into a delivery hall in the form of a rotunda with eight columns, cornice and domed ceiling.

Among the general accommodations are a large reading room, a children's room, a library and a toilet room. The stack room, behind the librarian's delivery desk, will easily accommodate 10,000 volumes in one story of standard stacks, 30,000 in all. The reference room will hold 1600 volumes in standard cases, the reading room 800 volumes and the children's room 800 in low wall cases.

The principal rooms are so grouped that on entering the delivery hall one commands a view of the interior of the whole building. From the delivery desk the attendant can directly supervise all of the rooms.

The lower wall space of delivery hall and rotunda are utilized for seats, card catalogues, etc., leaving the floor space of the hall practically clear.

The vestibule and the delivery hall have mosaic and terrazzo floors with marble bases, and the backs of curved seats are to be carried up to same height as bookcases, making splendid pedestals for fine bronzes, statuary, etc. Taken as a whole, the combination of the columns, broad openings, frieze, cornice and domed ceilings, the height and clear space, give a noticeable dignity and character to the building.

While the abundance of light from the large windows, and through the wide openings, make all parts of the building bright and cheerful, the broad aisle through the stack room with the fine group of windows in the rear, adds an exceptionally fine and beautiful feature to what is usually the most unattractive part of the modern library, and at the same time gives a strong light on the delivery desk.

THE IMITATIVE JAP.

Tragedy of a Unique Gold Necklace in the Land of the Mikado.

There is one travelled woman in New York city who has no admiration for the Japanese. Her feeling is the result of a trip which she took recently in the Orient and which ended at her brother's home in Tokio, where he is the head of an exporting firm.

"The Japs are too tricky for me," she said recently, half angrily. "When I landed I thought everything about the country was lovely, and I enthused until my brother was weary."

"I told him the charming part of it all was that the Japanese were so honest. He smiled in a pitying way. Now I understand why."

"What started the trouble was that bead necklace, the one with the pearls inserted in gold links with a monogram locket suspended by a band woven from tiny gold chains. There never was another like it, and everybody admired it as unique."

"When I had been in Tokio a few days the clasp in the back of the thing broke and I took it to a native jeweller. The fellow looked it over and said that he could fix it in two or three days. I got the thing back, done perfectly and finished on time to the very second. It cost about half as much as it would have done here in the city."

"A day or so after that I started on a trip through the rural districts of the country and got back a month later, more charmed with the land than I had been before. My brother took us to one of the big native gardens that evening, and there were a lot of English and Americans there."

"We hadn't been seated at one of the tables more than a minute when Sally, my sister, pulled my sleeve and pointed at a nearby table."

"She's got your necklace on!" Sally said.

"I looked. It was true. There was an English woman with the exact duplicate of my gold and pearl necklace. A few minutes later I saw another woman who also had a necklace like mine. Before the evening was over I saw nine of them."

"I lay awake that night and thought it over. Early the next morning I hurried around to the jeweller who had repaired my necklace. To my horror, there was a window filled with them. 'The Very New in American Nobbery,' a sign read.

"I gave up all hope of ever wearing that necklace again. Every woman in Tokio who had the money bought one, and they were so common that I was ashamed to be seen wearing the original."

"My brother bought one and we compared the two. They had copied it exactly from mine. Even the same number of links was in each of the little chains. The jeweller had even copied our family crest and had included my own monogram in the design."

"The last I saw of the duplicate necklace was in the hotel at Chicago. A woman I had never seen came into the dining room with one of them on, monogram and all. I passed her in the hall that evening, and smiling, I said:

"Just back from Japan?"

"She nodded with a smile, and then I saw a look of surprise steal over her face. She's probably wondering yet how I learned where she had been."

"The Japs are great inventors, but they are greater imitators, and still greater thieves. I'll never forgive that race in all my life. They destroyed the value of the only real heirloom I own."

"Don't trust a Jap with anything, even an old dress. They copied a waist for me, though, so closely, from one of my old ones, that I never had to have a fitting, and it came out exactly right."—N. Y. Sun.

From the stern, rock-bound coast of Massachusetts comes a pamphlet crammed with statistics upon the servant question—that eternal problem that began as soon as Eve hired her first cook—and hasn't been settled since. The compiler of the grided array of figures is Charles F. Pidgin, chief of the Bureau of Statistics and Labor, who for years has been sightless.

After careful dissection of the Boston pamphlet, no solution of the servant question can be found between its covers, although some suggestions have been gathered from the women of the Massachusetts clubs for self-improvement and the members of the alumnae associations of various women's colleges who were implored for answers.

One question was whether women would be willing to pay higher wages for competent, trained servants. One-third of the women answered "Yes," more than half answered "No," and the remainder, about 11 per cent, refused to commit themselves.

Regarding the reverse of the picture, however. When asked whether employers would be willing to grant certain privileges, such as shorter hours or more free time every day, in place of higher wages, the yes and no contingents each decreased, while the non-committal 11 per cent swelled to 24.

One inducement came from a conservative New Englander who "would offer higher pay at the end of five years' service in one family." A pessimist knew of no inducement "unless a new race of beings is created."

The inexorable law of supply and demand comes in for abuse, as the chief cause of high wages for poor servants, the factory and shop taking the more self-reliant and capable young women and leaving too few of the others to do

household work satisfactorily.

The hiring of servants who live outside and come to the house to do specified tasks meets with a divided verdict. Boston had a system whereby a company kept a number of properly certified servants in a central house whence they were dispatched as first aid to the servantless housewife, returning to the distributing agency after their work was done; but the company found it impossible to make money by the plan, although the service worked well in all other particulars. Perhaps in this germ lies a solution to the brain-fagging problem, and some Newton or Napier may arise to tackle it.

Mr. Pidgin's statistical romance of the kitchen and the washtub has plenty in it over which the housekeeper may gnash her teeth and chew the bitter cud of reflection.

William G. Grundy is Mr. Pidgin's clerk. Perhaps Mrs. Grundy furnished some of the intimate details found in the volume.—Washington Post.

KEPT HOME ON $3 MONTH

But the Court Ordered Sullivan to Give His Wife $20

Patrick J. Sullivan, 35 years old, of Newton Centre, made his 18th appearance in court here Saturday, when he was arraigned on a charge of non-support of his wife.

Testimony brought out the assertion that he had given her but $3 in the last month with which to run their home.

Found guilty of the charge, a fine of $20 was imposed, the money to go to his wife. He was committed until the money could be paid.

SNELLING RESIGNS

Will Leave $4,000 Job to Enter Business

Lives in Newton Centre and Is Widely Known

Mr. John Linzee Snelling, who has resided for a number of years on Elgin street, Newton Centre, has resigned his position as United States appraiser to enter business in Boston. Mr. Snelling is well known in this city.

Asst.-Secy. Reynolds of the treasury department announced Tuesday that he had received Mr. Snelling's resignation and added that he would accept it. It will go into effect Sept. 1.

In his letter to Mr. Reynolds, the Boston appraiser says that his only reason for retiring from office is his desire to enter private business. He states that he has formed a connection with a cotton commission house and wishes to start to work in the early fall on account of certain market conditions.

Mr. Snelling writes Mr. Reynolds that he has no complaint whatever to make of his present position and that his relations with the department have been uniformly pleasant and satisfactory.

Mr. Snelling took office Jan. 30, 1904, and the department states his record has been very good. His place pays $4,000 a year. It is expected here that Mr. Snelling's successor will be picked immediately if indeed he has not already been selected.

HACK DRIVER FINED

Cost Him $5.00 For Not Having Proper Badge

Martin J. J. Manning, a local hack driver, was Wednesday fined $3 for driving his hack without a proper badge upon his cap. The city government recently passed a new regulation that all hack drivers shall wear metallic badges bearing their numbers while driving their vehicles.

"Raffles" Found at Last

"Raffles," the dog which has been bothering residents of various parts of the city for several weeks by stealing milk from door steps, was found at Newton Lower Falls Wednesday by Patrolman Nathaniel Seaver. The animal was a Scotch collie. Every time he saw a policeman in uniform he would run, although he readily made friends with other persons.

WEDDED HERE

Boston Couple Came to Newton to Plight Troth

The wedding in this city of two Boston persons took place Saturday.

The groom was George A. Botsford, 43 years old, of 193 Grampian way, Boston. He was born in Fredericton, N. B., a son of George Botsford of that place.

The bride was Miss Hannah M. Skinner, 37 years old, who has lived for some time at 586 Massachusetts avenue, Boston. She is a native of Boston, being the daughter of Edward M. Skinner. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Sumner U. Sherman.

WATCH AND CHAIN GONE

Thieves Visited Newtonville Home of Mrs. Adams

Mrs. G. W. S. Adams reports that sometime in the last few days her house at 77 Fair Oaks avenue, Newtonville, was entered and a valuable gold watch and chain stolen. There is no trace of the thieves as yet.

Overtaken in Purgatory Cove

While gathering lilies in Purgatory cove Wednesday two Waltham young women overturned their canoe and were thrown into the muddy waters of the cove. They were assisted out by park officers Coombs and Millner. After drying themselves and washing their clothes at the Metropolitan police station at Auburndale they were able to return home.

Mr. Moore Dead

Mr. Luther S. Moore, aged 61, died Tuesday at the Newton hospital after an illness with appendicitis. He is survived by a wife, Mrs. Isabella E. Moore. He lived at 1109 Boylston street, Chestnut Hill. The body will be taken to Douglas, Me., today for burial.

NEW TAX RATE

DOWN TO $16.40

Reduction of $1.60 From Last Year's Record

Drop Is More Than Expected
By Many—Increase In Polls of 112

The tax rate for the present year was announced Wednesday as $16.40. This is a reduction of $1.60 from last year's rate of $18, which was the highest in the history of the city.

The reduction was much larger than was looked for by many residents and not a few of the city officials, although it was generally believed that there would be a material reduction made by the assessors.

The rate of $18 last year was the same as that of 1902. At the office of the assessors, when this year's rate was announced Wednesday noon, it was stated that the rate will not again be as high as that of last year unless the state and county tax amounts to an excessive figure.

The large state and county tax and not the expense of the city itself have been the cause of a high tax rate in previous years. This year these taxes amount to $230,638.72.

The total valuation of the city at present is $65,067,040, an increase of $1,331,670 over last year. The personal property is rated at $16,215,890, a gain of $547,020 over a year ago. Real property in this city now amounts to $49,751,150, which is an increase of $784,650 over last year.

There are now 9940 polls in the city. This is an increase over a year ago of 112.

"The reduction of $1.60 in the tax rate is more than many residents looked for," said Mayor Warren Wednesday noon. "Newton's tax rate has been higher than many residents would desire it for several years and the reduction will be received with gratification." Other city officials expressed similar sentiments.

THREE ICEMEN

ARE FINED $10

Convicted in the False Weight Cases on Wednesday

Maximum Fines Imposed and Other Cases on File
On Nolo Pleas

Maximum fines were imposed in three cases in which Newton icemen were charged with giving false weight and upon the defendants pleading nolo pro three other cases were placed on file in the municipal court Wednesday.

In summing up the evidence of two cases tried at length this week and one which was threshed out last week, Judge Kennedy stated that the ice business in Newton is carried on by a peculiar system.

Mayor Warren was an interested listener throughout the trial, occupying a chair beside Judge Kennedy. The court room was well filled with spectators from various parts of the city and a number from out of town.

The case of William Cameron, employed by George D. Miller, proprietor of the Crystal Lake Ice company of Newton Centre and charged with delivering false weight ice to Jeremiah J. Mahoney of Elliot street, Newton Upper Falls, on July 19 was first taken up. Patrolman H. W. Marriner testified to seeing Cameron carry the ice into the house without weighing it. With Patrolman Edward P. O'Halloran he weighed the cake immediately after the icemen had left. It weighed 34 pounds, while the "score" card marked by the iceman asserted 50 pounds had been delivered.

Was Short of Ice

Patrolman Marriner added that when he served a summons upon Cameron the latter said he remembered the incident, and stated that he delivered to Mr. Mahoney light weight ice because he was short of a supply in the wagon at the time.

Cross-examined, Patrolman Marriner said the chest was not full, and that there was only one piece in it. He could identify the piece as that he saw taken from the ice cart, he believed.

Counsel Thomas W. Proctor, appearing for the defendant, interrupted with the statement that the patrolman must be "talking through his helmet" when he thought he could identify the cake. City Solicitor Winfield S. Slocum presented the government's case.

Jeremiah J. Mahoney testified he was not at home when the delivery was made but identified the card upon which the weights are placed by the ice man.

The Price Increased

"The first of the season I was notified that the price would be 35 cents per 100 pounds," said Mr. Mahoney, "but Continued on Page 8.

"Relations of the State and Nation" His Subject

No better sentiment exists than the love of the old home, the desire to visit it and to once more mingle with relatives and early friends, renewing former acquaintances and strengthening the family ties which separation, diversity of interests and new scenes are so apt to weaken and break. The old home celebration has an educational effect and is frequently a financial benefit as well as an appeal to the best sensibilities and I know what a delight it is to be a part of such an assemblage as that which you have just left with all of its good cheer and happy reunions. Just why an outsider should be invited to such a family party to discuss a serious subject I am not able to explain, but I have my credentials and I promise you that I will not take very much time from your other and I am sure more agreeable entertainments. Your officers have suggested that I speak of the "Relations of the State and Nation and the present tendency toward centralization"—a subject which I agree with them is of the greatest importance.

STRICT AND LOOSE CONSTRUCTION.
The framers of the Constitution could not foresee all the problems which have developed since its adoption. They had to deal with a vast, but sparsely settled country, there being between the sections few, if any, means of communication, each section having even greater diversity of interests than now, without the present means of becoming familiar with the needs and interests of other sections. They attempted to remedy evils which might come from such different conditions as free against slave states, agricultural against commercial communities, large divisions against small ones. Very soon after the adoption of the Constitution new problems and new questions were presented and these problems and questions led to the formation of political parties which at first were divided almost entirely on the powers of the Constitution,—whether it should be strictly or liberally construed; as new questions were presented, the strict constructionist said—"you can't do that, because the Constitution does not explicitly say you may"; it does not refer to that question; while the liberal constructionist would reply that authority was intended under the promoting general welfare clause or the interstate commerce clause or some other general provision.

THE CONSTITUTION IS AFFECTED BY CHANGING CONDITIONS.

The fact is that while the Constitution was framed in 1787, its application has been a growth and as applied to present day problems it is a vastly different instrument from the Constitution of 1787.

One hundred years ago Henry Clay, in discussing the Constitution of the United States, said, "The Constitution is true never changes, it is always the same, but the force of circumstances and the lights of experience may evolve to the fallible person charged with its administration the fitness and necessity of the particular exercise of constructive power today which they did not see at a former time."

There are many men, consistent advocates of a strong central government, who yet are somewhat concerned over the present tendency toward paternalism and who fear that unless this tendency is checked it will prove prejudicial to the best interests of the republic.

There are others, consistent and earnest advocates of State rights, so-called, who have always opposed any movement toward centralization and who today feel great alarm at the steady course being followed in that direction. This movement, however, apparently meets the approval of the great majority of the people of the country, and it is worth while to consider whether this attitude on the part of the people means an approval of the policy itself or whether it evidences a general disposition to stand by the administration and especially to show to the President that whatever his policy may be, his motives are considered so honest and so devoted to the best interests of the people, that the people themselves are willing to trust to his judgment and integrity of purpose, believing that he is in a better position than the individual citizen to pass upon these questions and to check any great and growing evils.

THE WEAKNESS OF THE CONFEDERATION.

As I have said, there has been division of sentiment on this question since the foundation of the government, and even before the adoption of the Constitution it was quite apparent that an organization must be formed which would enable some central power to pass upon the many questions which could not be suitably treated by the separate state governments. In fact, the government of the Confederation had fallen to the lowest possible depths so far as efficiency was concerned. It not only had no positive power over the action of the several states, but it was held in contempt by all foreign powers and furnished one of the most striking examples of the rapidity with which a strong and self-reliant people can lose the position of advantage which they have obtained after a long and successful struggle by careless and lax government, for at the end of the Revolutionary War the people of this country had the respect of all European governments; in six short years, however, it is doubtful if they had the respect of any European government. Moreover, there is no question that all Europe expected that the confederation, loosely put together as it was, would get into internal trouble giving an excuse for foreign countries to interfere and finally to seize portions of our territory and to divide up this continent. For this reason any attempts to form a stronger national government were opposed by all foreign interests. Not only were the foreign interests opposed to the strengthening of our confederacy, but in consequence of a feeling among many eminent men in different States of the Union that they would lose a certain percentage of their standing and influence if they did not maintain the identity of the separate state organizations, there was also a powerful and intelligent opposition at home.

But even before the adoption of the Constitution sufficient warning was given as to the possibilities of strife, unless a stronger national government were formed, by several attempts to break away from the separate states, among them the threatened separation of Kentucky from Virginia, the quarrels between New York and Vermont, the Wyoming troubles in Pennsylvania and Shay's rebellion in our own State, and it was during this period that the agitation commenced which culminated later in the formation of the State of Maine from Massachusetts territory. The reasons assigned in this case resemble those urged in all of the others—they were, that the mode of taxation was unjust, the system of representation was unequal, the excise and import acts were tyrannical, the duty on deeds and the regulation of trade were burdensome and injurious in the extreme—but most serious and earnestly urged of all was the assumed impossibility of Massachusetts to ever understand the interests of Maine.

Strange as it may seem, it was not a loyal or a patriotic spirit that was the first real incentive for getting together, but it was rather the condition of commercial interests in the several states. The states had different monetary systems, based on different standards, issued currency without suitable provisions for redemption and passed all kinds of laws and regulations so prejudicial to the interests, wishes and laws in other states, that it was practically impossible to carry on any business between them. Naturally, commercial interests were hampered and active attempts were made to cure these difficulties.

HAMILTON AND JEFFERSON.

At the time of the adoption of the Constitution and for the period immediately following, Hamilton and Jefferson were the great representatives of the divergent views on this subject. In many respects Hamilton was the organizer of the National Government; his treasury policy has stood the test of time, and other policies which showed his brilliancy and his guiding hand have proved equally useful and desirable features of the government; while Jefferson had drafted the Declaration of Independence and in addition to being one of the leading men in the Revolutionary period, he became later—once Vice President and twice President of the United States, and the founder of the one great political party which has endured to the present day without material change.

The real question which divided Jefferson and Hamilton can be put in a single phrase,—whether our government should be a federal league or a national union. After a careful study of Hamilton's life and his policies I am satisfied that if he had been able to control the situation absolutely, the constitution which he would have framed and which he wished modeled as far as possible on the English system of government, would not have answered our purposes as well as the Constitution which was developed by the compromise of all the divergent views.

In August, 1800 Mr. Jefferson declared—"The true theory of our Constitution is surely the wisest and best, the states are independent as to everything within themselves and united as to everything representing foreign nations". He further declared and insisted that the Constitution is a contract between independent states not binding upon anyone of them beyond its distinct declarations.

This question of whether the general government should have power to control its own actions or to enforce its own laws soon made itself prominent.

The question first arose in connection with the proposal to establish a military force, which the strict constructionists of that time opposed from fear that it would in some way hamper or prejudice the real interests of the people. Again, an excise tax was one of the first taxes levied by our Government and in many places, especially in Pennsylvania, the collection of this tax was resisted and there is no doubt that the strict constructionists at that time believed that this resistance was to a certain extent justified, on the ground that the power to impose an excise tax or an internal revenue tax, as we would now call it, belonged exclusively to the separate states. Moreover, vigorous opposition by the strict constructionists was made to the establishment of a National Bank on the ground that the Constitution did not explicitly provide for it.

PARTY INCONSISTENCY AS TO CONSTRUCTION.

In the examples just given the attitude of loose and strict constructionists was consistent with their respective views of the Constitution. But, as Mr. Bryce truly says,—no section or party has at all times been free from the tendency to base their construction of the Constitution on what, for the time being, have seemed to be their personal interests. Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, although loose constructionists, refused to obey the call made by the Secretary of War at the outbreak of the War of 1812 for their quota of militia, on the ground that the President had not the authority to make such a call and the same year the question of the admission of Louisiana, taken from territory not part of the organized union but from that purchased from France, raised from the Federalists, the loose constructionists of that period, a storm of protest as being beyond the scope or intent of the Constitution.

One of the most vigorous of the exponents of this opposition was the first Josiah Quincy, then a Federalist member of Congress. In speaking in opposition to the proposition, he said, "I declare it to be a manifest and atrocious usurpation of power, of a nature dissolving, according to undesirable principles of moral law, the obligations of our national compact and leading to all the awful consequences which flow from such a state of things," and he asserted that if the bill passed it would be a death blow to the Constitution. The records show that not only were those death blows constantly repeated in the minds of narrow and literal constructionists, but as a remedy they frequently talked of and even threatened secession and finally in 1861 that method of asserting the powers and rights of the states was tried, but even in that order power was found in the Constitution to compel a State, which saw fit to go out of the Union, to remain—"the public welfare and more perfect union" required that they remain in and by force of arms that question was forever settled. So jealous were the States of their supposed rights, that within twenty years during the early days under the Constitution thirteen states asserted the doctrine of state sovereignty, either by charging Congress with usurpation of powers or by proposing amendments to the Constitution, or by defying the President and the Supreme Court; they also proclaimed the doctrine of nullification and threatened to secede if certain laws were not passed and others substituted.

In further illustration of the tendency of parties in this country to base their construction of the Constitution upon their temporary interests, it may be said that even Mr. Jefferson, who had opposed all his life on other occasions every attempt to strengthen our central government, recommended and concluded the purchase of the Louisiana territory, and indication that he believed that a strong central government was bad and dangerous when controlled by the opposition, but might possibly be wise and virtuous when conducted by his own party. It is interesting to note that this view was not peculiar to Mr. Jefferson and that very often men oppose a measure or a policy if it is to be controlled by those of a different way of thinking, when if it were to be inaugurated or operated by themselves, or those representing them, they would not consider it a dangerous experiment. Doubtless many of the policies of the present administration, if they were controlled or had been adopted by the opposition party would be condemned by many members of the party in power who now give them their approval.

In regard to the purchase of Louisiana, there was certainly nothing in the Constitution which authorized the central government to purchase additional territory for the benefit, not of any one state, but for the benefit of all the states, but there is no doubt that Jefferson in making this purchase, while, as I have shown, it was directly opposed to all of his theories, had to differentiate between sound abstract doctrine, as he termed it, and a sensible act inconsistent therewith, so that he took the wise, patriotic and faithful course and made the purchase, although if he had followed his own construction of the Constitution he never would have done it.

THE TENDENCY TO CENTRALIZATION.

PARTS OF CARS GONE

It was reported to the police by the New York Central railroad Tuesday that sometime within a few nights previously 10 journal car brasses had been stolen from flat cars left on the tracks between the Newton and Faneuil stations.

—Youth.

The flat cars were left standing in what is known among the railroad men as "the dump," which is situated about midway between the two stations. It is thought that the journal brasses were stolen by persons desiring to sell them to junk dealers. The police of surrounding places were notified to be on the watch for the brasses.

MISS BLAKE TO WED

Inventor's Daughter Engaged to a Boston Lawyer

An engagement was announced at Stockbridge early this week which will be of much interest to residents of Newton and more especially to residents of Auburndale, many of whom are well acquainted with the prospective bride.

The engagement was that of Miss Agnes Blake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Blake of Weston, and Mr. Stephen Fitzgerald, a well known Boston lawyer. The young woman's father is widely known as the inventor of the Blake transmitter.

A pretty Berkshire romance is associated with the announcement, for the couple first met last Fourth of July at a house party given by Mrs. Oscar Isagis at Clovercroft. Mrs. Isagis and her daughter, Miss Nora Isagis, entertained at several luncheons and a dinner party on the night of the Fourth, followed by a brilliant display of fireworks. They met a number of the younger set in Stockbridge, who were much surprised as well as pleased to hear of the engagement.

BITT OFF HIS THUMB

Horse Nipped Newton Centre Man in Boston

Cornelius Uniacke, a Newton Centre teamster, met with a painful accident in Boston Monday. While trying to pat a work horse in the down town section of Washington street the animal nipped at Uniacke and bit off his right thumb. He was hurried to the Relief station of the City hospital, but it was found that the thumb could not be saved. The following day Uniacke was in a more comfortable condition.

He has been employed for sometime by Arthur Muldoon as a teamster.

Real Estate.

Through the office of John T. Burns, 363 Centre street, Newton, the estate situated at 13-15 Maple street, Watertown, called the "Maplewood" has been sold to the S. L. Jordan estate of Boston. Mr. E. T. Wilson of Farmington, New Hampshire, was the grantor. The property consists of a six apartment house, containing six separate suites of 5 rooms and bath each which yield an annual rental of $1080 per year. The estate is assessed for $11,000.

The Fuller estate situated at 29-31 Fayette street, Newton, has been sold to Lawrence O'Brien of Cambridge. The property consists of a double house with 8 rooms to each side, together with 4307 square feet of land, the whole being assessed for $3700. John T. Burns, Newton, was the broker in this transaction.

Mrs. Annie E. Fuller was the grantor. The house has been remodelled and made into four flats. Mr. O'Brien buys for investment.

Agreements have been signed through the office of John T. Burns, Newton, for the sale of 25 Windom street, Allston. The 6 room cottage and 4000 square feet of land are assessed for $2100. Mrs. E. O'Brien of Boston was the grantor and Mrs. Mary E. Sweeney of Charlestown the grantee. Mrs. Sweeney buys for a home.

Tenor (singing): "Oh, 'appy, 'appy, 'appy be thy dreams." Professor: "Stop, stop! Why don't you sound, the H?" Tenor: "It don't go no higher than G!"

Druggist: "Try it again, little one. What was it your mamma told you to get?" Little Girl (with another severe mental effort): "I think it was 'I died of opiumus.' I want ten cents' worth."

THEATRES

Grand Opera House—Next week's attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House will be Mr. Howard Hall in his latest success, "The Millionaire Detective." The central figure gives Sherlock Holmes a close rub, and is portrayed by Howard Hall, an actor of ability and one of Boston's most popular favorites, who is the author of several plays, among them, "The Man Who Dared", which achieved such a pronounced success a few years ago. An electrical illusion is introduced with startling effect in the third act, and the effect of bringing an apparently dead man back to life is so unusual and is so well managed that it takes the house by storm. Mr. Hall is supported by Miss Lorna Elliott, and considering the general excellence of both company and play, next week should be one of the banner ones in the history of that popular play house. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Keith's Theatre—The variety and excellence of the vaudeville program announced for Keith's Theatre for the week of Aug. 13 will bear comparison with many of the big programs presented at that favorite playhouse during the midwinter season. The featured attraction of the bill will be the Williams and Walker Glee Club, consisting of seventeen superior colored vocalists, who will be remembered for their tremendous success in Williams and Walker's "In Dahomey" two seasons ago, and last season scored a tremendous hit at Keith's. Every member of the club is a vocalist of no mean ability and they will present, not only the plantation and folk songs for which their race is so justly noted, but also music of the highest classical order. The club is under the direction of Mr. William C. Elkins, an artist who received his major education in the noted musical centers of Europe. The surrounding show is fully up to the standard of the principal attraction and includes E. R. Phillips and company, in a laughable one-act farce, "Her Bus Day"; the Zarrow trio, original bicycle pantomimists; Alf Grant and Ethel Hoag presenting their clever specialty, "A Little of Everything"; the Gleasons and O'Houlihan, in a potpourri of singing, dancing and music; John Hazard, monologue comedian and storyteller; Saona, in impersonations of noted Americans; Lester and Quinn, clever wooden shoe dancers; Rhodes and Carter, skilful comedy acrobats, and the Lyric trio of talented vocalists. The Fagettes woman's orchestra will inaugurate the twelfth week of their annual summer engagement with an entire new program of selections. The popular musicians seem actually to grow in favor as the weeks roll by. The customary new list of comedy and interesting motion pictures will be exhibited in the kinetograph.

Tremont Theatre—Next Monday night, Harry Bulger and his associates in Henry W. Savage's production of the musical oddity "The Man From Now," will enter into the last two weeks of the engagement at the Tremont Theatre, and when the Bangs, Bryan and Klein offering reaches the end of the run on Saturday night, Aug. 25, it will carry away the palm of the most successful summer production Boston has enjoyed in years. The one hundredth performance will be celebrated during the last week of the engagement and it will be fittingly commemorated. "The Man From Now," from the very first production has been a treat of no mean measure to Bostonians who seek advertisement in the theatres during the theatre term, for there was a desirable novelty, a unique something which attracted and held the attention of all sorts and conditions of playgoers. Mr. Bulger in the leading role has a part which fits him far better than anything he has essayed in many seasons past. The lines, the songs are bright, and there is action every second Mr. Bulger is on the stage. The brilliancy of the authors' lines and his natural ability as a fun-maker made for him the great success he has enjoyed all summer. Upon the conclusion of his Boston engagement Mr. Bulger and his company will go to New York and there open the regular season at the New Amsterdam Theatre on Monday night, Sept. 3. Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be continued here until the end of the engagement.

Norumbega Park—Some of the biggest crowds that Norumbega Park has ever known found welcome relief from the terrific heat of the early part of the present week at this picturesque resort on the banks of the cool and well shaded Charles River. In fact the Sunday attendance was the biggest the park has had this season and that speaks volumes for its popularity when one considers that there have been some exceptionally big holiday attendances this year and the recent Sunday crowds have been way ahead of any record established in previous seasons. There seems to be no let up in the success of the Norumbega Park management to secure better and better vaudeville talent and judging from the enthusiastic attendances of the past three weeks with the constant outbursts of applause, the laughter and the expressions of astonishment over the numbers presented it would seem that the regular weekly patrons of this theatre never tire of the entertainment offered. In addition to the restaurant and the theatre there are numberless other features—the zoological garden with its hosts of wild and domestic animals, the boating and canoeing on the Charles, no better equipped boat house on the entire river than that at Norumbega, the mysterious Chalet, with its electrical wonders and the Japanese village, the naphtha launches which provide a ride up and down the river, without personal exertion, the merry-go-round, the swing court, the electrical fountain, are a few of the attractions offered among which all may find amusement.

We venture to suggest that this is a good time to order your next winter's coal. And this is no weather joke.

The reduction in the tax rate of $1.60 is most welcome to the tax payers of Newton. While to some extent the reduction has been anticipated, yet, the pleasure is none the less because it has become a reality. The new rate was possible because there has been a net reduction in the state, metropolitan and county assessments of about $30,000 and a further reduction of over $31,000 in the regular city budget. The former was the result of the new apportionment for metropolitan park assessments, with a rebate for the over-payment of 1905, and a substantial sum saved on the state tax. The city appropriations were less, principally on account of the large payment of water bonds last year, with a resulting saving in interest and sinking fund accounts, as well as the separation of the water department expenses from the tax levy. To ex-mayor Weed, more than to any one person is due the credit for the lessened expenses for the park assessments and the city budget, altho Mayor Warren has been careful not to add to the tax levy. The Assessors also deserve great credit for the handsome addition to the valuation list, of $1,331,670, notwithstanding the fact that heavy losses were made in the 1905 list of personal property.

The result is certainly gratifying and points the way to the time when a uniform tax rate of $16. will become a fact.

We have little disposition to criticize the recent apportionment of representatives in this County, as the Commissioners have allotted Newton the three men to which we are entitled. In fact, the average of the apportionment has been distinctly better than that of ten years ago when viewed from the same standpoint. In 1896 the average for one representative was 2331, and the 26 city representatives had a constituency of 2395, while the 11 town representatives had constituency of but 2152, while the 10 representatives from districts made up of cities and towns, averaged 2363 each.

The present apportionment, while having glaring instances of discrimination, averages much better than that of 1896, as the 32 city representatives have constituencies of 2818 each, the 13 town representatives, average 2801, and the 3 from both cities and towns average 3155 with 2844 being the general average for the entire county.

With three men in the lower branch of the Legislature, Newton will be able to bring some influence to bear on the important metropolitan expenses which are fast becoming burdensome.

The publication of the fact that Newton stands at the head of the list of all the cities in the United States in the per capita net debt, does not strike one favorably at the first glance and indeed, needs careful investigation before it can be accepted as an adverse symptom of municipal welfare. At the present time we can only ask our readers to wait until a careful analysis has been made and reasonable conclusions drawn therefrom.

With the allotment of an additional representative and a reduction of $1.60 in the tax rate announced in the same week, who will dare maintain that events of interest do not occur in mid-summer.

POLITICAL NOTES

The Democratic state convention will probably be held at Tremont Temple, Boston, on Oct. 6th. Newton is entitled to 8 of the 1065 delegates.

The Republican state primaries will be held Sept. 25th.

EDWIN B. FLETCHER DEAD

Father of Mrs. Henry E. Oxnard
Passed Away Wednesday

After an illness of about a week Edwin B. Fletcher, a former insurance man of Lawrence, died at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Henry E. Oxnard, 40 Bridge street, Nonantum, Wednesday.

Mr. Fletcher was the father of Mrs. Oxnard, whose husband is the pastor of the North Evangelical chapel at Nonantum. He removed to this city from the death of Dr. Stearns, for many years a well known physician at Nonantum. Mr. Fletcher came into considerable local prominence as one of the

AFTER NOMINATION

Four Want to Succeed
Senator DanaNewton in the Lead With a Score of Delegates

The hot weather of the past week has caused no lessening of interest in the political situation in the First Middlesex senatorial district. From present indications it looks as though there will be a fight for the nomination between Representative Edward L. McManus of Natick and Ex-Representative Charles J. MacPherson of Framingham.

There is no lack of candidates, but Newton, which has Ex-President Dana, and the town of Watertown, which with this city could control the district by pooling the votes, have agreed with the westerly end of the district that the upper section is now entitled to nominate the candidate to succeed Senator William F. Dana. For that reason Representative Henry Seward of neighboring Watertown will keep his hands off.

Mr. McManus' friends assert that they will have a majority of the votes of Natick, Ashland, Sherborn, Holliston, Hopkinton, giving him 12 votes, and that under the agreement he should have Newton and Watertown, since it is agreed that whichever candidate has the majority of the up-district delegates shall be given the support of the lower end—Newton and Watertown. Mr. MacPherson claims that he will have eight votes in Framingham and two votes from Ashland.

The number of delegates to which the coming convention is entitled is as follows:

Newton	20
Ashland	2
Framingham	8
Holliston	2
Hopkinton	2
Natick	6
Sherborn	1
Watertown	6
Weston	2
Total	49
Choice	25

The candidates are Representative McManus of Natick, MacPherson of Framingham, Staples of Framingham and Hemenway of Holliston.

MR. LEE'S HOUSE

Evidence That Someone Tried to Enter it at 1.30 A. M.

Evidence of an attempted break in the dwelling of Francis W. Lee on Hammond st. Chestnut Hill, was discovered about 1.30 yesterday morning by Patrolmen Fisher and Cronin.

While the policemen were patrolling their beats their attention was called to the Lee residence and upon making an investigation they found a cellar window and a rear door had been opened.

So far as could be ascertained by the police nothing was missing. It is thought by some of the residents of the vicinity that an attempt had been made to ransack the house, but that the thieves had been frightened away in the nick of time.

The dwelling has been vacant for a number of weeks, the Lees being out of the city.

CITY HALL NOTES

Bids Opened for the Concord Street
Bridge—Gossip

Bids for the new bridge over the Charles river near Newton Lower Falls which the city of Newton and the town of Weston are to jointly construct were opened Tuesday noon. There were but four bids submitted, and that of the W. H. Mague company of this city was the lowest, the amount being stated as $147,785.50. Bids were also submitted by Coleman Bros., of Boston, William H. Ward of Lowell and Simpson Bros. Corporation of Boston. The bids were opened by City Engineer Farnham.

According to the weekly report rendered Tuesday by Chief of Police Mitchell and presented at the mayor's office there were 40 arrests for a variety of offenses in this city last week. This was the largest number of any week for several years.

Mr. Alfred M. Russell of the board of health department is home from a brief vacation spent at Cottage City.

Mayor Warren returned to his desk early this week after a brief trip to Charlestown, P. E. I.

Dr. Frances George Curtis of the health department returned Sunday from a successful fishing trip in Maine.

Water Commissioner Whitney is enjoying a vacation trip to New Brunswick.

Went 33 Miles an Hour

George D. Draper was arraigned in the municipal court Wednesday on a charge of speeding an automobile over 33 miles an hour on Commonwealth avenue. He pleaded nolo. A fine of $10 was imposed.

BASE BALL

Some Interesting Games
In This CityLocal Teams Putting up Good Exhibitions—Gossip

In an easy victory the Clintons whitewashed the Victors to the tune of 6 to 0 Saturday afternoon at the Newton Upper Falls grounds. There was a large crowd of enthusiastic spectators despite the rain.

The Clintons made one run in the first inning, but the Victors held them down well until the sixth, when things began to come the Clintons' way and runs were quickly piled up. The first half of the game was a well played contest. The winners made every hit count for a run and made only two errors. The losing team made three hits and four errors. The batteries played well. Tahaldi and Bergen were the battery for the winners and Noyes and Jones for the losing team.

On the Newton Highlands diamond Saturday afternoon a good sized crowd of spectators assembled to witness the game between the C.H.s and the C.H.s. The contest was won by the former aggregation without much trouble by a score of 12 to 0. The winners secured 17 hits and made three errors. The losers made four errors and secured only three hits. O'Kane and Rowan were the battery for the winners and Rowley and Woods for the losing team.

RECENT DEATHS

NATHANIEL F. NYE

Mr. Nathaniel F. Nye, aged 77, died after a long illness Friday at his home on Grove street, Auburndale. He had been afflicted with paralysis for more than two and a half years and his death was not wholly unexpected. He was born in Sandwich, Mass., being a son of the late Thomas Nye and a descendant of one of the oldest Cape Cod families. He is survived by a wife.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at the family home in Auburndale. The remains were taken to Sandwich for burial in the Spring Hill cemetery in that town.

NAZAIRE HOTIN

Mr. Nazaire Hotin, aged 68, living at 308 California St., Nonantum, died Sunday as a result of a cancer. The funeral took place Tuesday and the burial was in the Ringe cemetery at Cambridge. He is survived by a wife. Mr. Hotin died on his birthday.

DIED AT HOSPITAL

Miss Bridget Kelly, aged 25, of 75 Fayette street, Watertown, died Sunday at the Newton Hospital, where she had been removed for treatment. The funeral took place Tuesday at Watertown and the burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery, that place.

MISS JANE W. SCUDDER

Miss Jane W. Scudder, aged 78 years, died Friday at her late home on Otis street, West Newton. She was a native of Boston and was a daughter of the late Charles Scudder. She had lived in West Newton many years. The funeral took place Sunday. The interment was made in Mt. Auburn cemetery.

MRS. ROXANNA C. STONE

Mrs. Roxanna C. Stone, wife of Mr. George F. Stone, formerly of Chestnut Hill, died last week in Redlands, Calif. She was 73 years old. The remains were brought to this city and the funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Cousens at 680 Beacon street, Newton Centre. There were many floral tributes. The burial was in the Newton cemetery.

MRS. MARY A. CLARK.

Mrs. Mary A. Clark died last week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Dodge of East Lexington. She was 73 years old. Mrs. Clark was the mother of Mrs. Charles H. Spring of Newton Lower Falls, Mr. F. W. Clark of Newton Highlands, Mrs. H. D. Chadwick of Waltham, Mrs. J. A. Dodge of East Lexington and Mrs. Heald of Pratts, N. H.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon at St. Mary's Episcopal church, Newton Lower Falls. The rector, Rev. Thomas L. Cole, was the officiating clergyman.

After having gone under the surface of the Charles river three times in the raceway of the Newton Lower Falls dam Wednesday afternoon, Frank Thompson, the 6-year old son of James Thompson, was rescued by George Dunne, a harbor, who dove for the lad. Edward Welch, the 6-year old son of John Welch, fell in at the same time and was pulled out by David Warren before he had gone under a second time.

The boys had been playing with several companions about the river during the afternoon. Finally they ventured out to a plank near the raceway, where the current runs very swiftly, and the Welch and Thompson boys lost their balance and fell in.

TWO DAYS' FAIR

Features of the Newton Centre CarnivalTwice Rain Interfered But Event Was a Success

Twice rain interfered with the third annual lawn party of the Working Boys' Home Industrial School, which took place Saturday and Monday, both afternoon and evening, on the Newton A. A. grounds at Newton Centre.

Despite the unfortunate weather conditions the home will net a snug sum of money as a result of the project, although it will not benefit financially to such an extent as it would have had there been fair weather the first day.

When the brass band comprising boys of the home struck up its concert at 1:30 o'clock Saturday there was a good showing of spectators on the grounds. From then until early evening there was a diversity of attractions which were well patronized.

The only athletic contest for boys was a 100-yard dash, which was won by James Gilday, with Joseph Leonard a close second and William Murphy third.

Col. Scannell's Goat

One feature which attracted much attention was the Kerry goat on exhibition through the kindness of Col. Roger Scannell of Boston. The animal was in charge of Messrs. D. J. Bergen, P. A. Murray, Richard M. Lyons and Thomas J. Lyons and was viewed by many guests.

A number of tastefully decorated tables presided over by members of various organizations were features. The M. C. O. F. table was in charge of members of Middlesex court 60, St. Bernard court 44, and Newton Centre court 201. The A. O. H. table was presided over by members of division 35 of Newton, division 54 of Newton Highlands, division 25 of Newton Lower Falls and division 53 of West Newton. Another table was in charge of members of the ladies auxiliaries of Newton Centre, Newton, Lower Falls and West Newton. The "home" table was presided over by members of the Working Boys' home industrial school aid society. The Young Ladies' Catholic union of Charlestown was in charge of the flying horses. There was also the African dodger and other regulation country fair attractions.

In a well contested game the Newton Upper Falls defeated the Watertowns at baseball, 9 to 2. On the Upper Falls team were a number of former members of the defunct all-Newton team which was in its time a star organization. For five weeks the Upper Falls and Watertowns had planned to cross bats and five times rain had called off the contest. The teams lined up as follows:

Newton Upper Falls—Halliday 1b, Slattery 2b, Collins cf, Sullivan 1b, Cushing p, Stumpf 3d, Simpson c, Donahue ss, Maloney rf.

Watertowns—Fagan lf, Coon ss, O'Brien c, Malloy p, Tahaldi 1b, Smith 2b, Cahill 3b, Seahill cf, Monahan rf.

A game of Gaelic football was started between teams representing the north and south sides of the city, but after a few minutes' play a drenching rain caused the event to be called off with honors about even between the two teams.

Free on Monday

On Monday the grounds were thrown open to the general public at noon, there being no admission charged at the second day of the party. A variety of races for boys and girls which had been postponed from Saturday were about to be run off when a sudden shower caused these events to again be called off. Other features of the big party went off successfully, however, and they were enjoyed by a big gathering of spectators from this city, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley, Needham, Charlestown, Roxbury and numerous other places.

A baby show was one of the most interesting features of the afternoon for the mothers. Of the many little Newton tots on exhibition little Miss Katherine McLean was adjudged the prettiest. She was presented a prize in gold offered by John Flood. The judges were Mrs. Mary O'Shea, Mrs. John Gaw, Mrs. Katherine Ryan, Mrs. William Welch, Mrs. Peter Gero and Miss Maria Healy.

By defeating the Victors, 6 to 3, the St. Mary's won the baseball championship of the south side of the city. Both teams comprised young men of the Newton Upper Falls district and the game aroused much enthusiasm.

In the Big Tent.

A vaudeville program by local and Waltham talent was the star feature of the evening. This was given in "the big tent" and was well patronized. The program included Miss Dolly Humphries, contralto; James Miller, ballads; Miss Sadie Swanton, descriptive songs; "Ben" Gibson and "Al" Shannon in "The Troublesome Servant"; Misses Sadie and Margaret Swanton in a coon sketch; Emedee Wright, dancing spec-talities; James Bruce, cornet solos; Matthew Sullivan, coon melodies; Richard Lahey, readings; Sadie Brown, songs and dances; Napoleon B. Grignon, magician; Emedee Gingress, violinist; Theodore Emery, piano selections; St. Onge and St. Onge of Waltham in a comedy monologue; Charles Edes, buck and wing dancing; Miss Mary Donovan, piano solos; Joseph Connors, violin selections. There were several concerts throughout the afternoon and evening by the school band. Dancing was enjoyed.

PILGRIMAGE TO QUEBEC

Shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre the Mecca of Catholics

A pilgrimage to St. Anne de Beaupre, near Quebec, under the direction of Rev. Fr. J. J. McCafferty of St. Thomas Church, Jamaica Plain, will leave Boston on Friday evening, Aug. 17th. Fr. McCafferty has arranged a very pleasing itinerary for the party, which will travel in a special train, over the Central Vermont route, via White River Junction, to Montreal, leaving the North Station about 7 o'clock. At Montreal next morning a special steamer will be boarded which will take the party down the mighty St. Lawrence River, a distance of some 200 miles, direct to the shrine. That night the religious exercises of the pilgrimage will begin, and on Sunday and Monday special services will be held for the pilgrims, and on Tuesday morning the party will receive holy communion and thus complete the religious portion of the pilgrimage. Returning home the Boston party will call at Quebec, where a stop of four hours will be made that the visitors may have an opportunity of seeing the quaint and historic city.

After dinner the sail up the St. Lawrence will begin and the 200 mile journey will be made slowly so that the afternoon and evening may be spent by the party on deck. At Montreal next morning special observation cars will take the party on a three hour's ride in and about Montreal, and at ten o'clock the pilgrim's special train will leave for Boston. The journey home by daylight will be one of great interest from a scenic point of view, the route being along the shores of Lake Champlain and through the Green Mountains of Vermont from Essex to White River Junction. The train will reach the North Station, Boston, early that evening.

Opportunity will be offered the pilgrims after reaching Montreal to stop over for a few days in the Canadian metropolis with its many churches and also at Burlington, Vt., for those who desire to visit the historic points on Lake Champlain and the Catholic summer school at Cliff Haven.

A reasonable figure of less than $25 will cover all expenses of travel on railroad and steamer and hotel accommodations from Boston to Beaupre and return.

Information and tickets may be had of Fr. McCafferty, St. Thomas Church, Jamaica Plain, or, if more convenient, at the New England Passenger Agency of the Central Vermont Railway, 360 Washington St., Boston.

MACRAE-PETERSON

West Newton Residents Were Quietly
Wedded Last Week

Mrs. Florence A. Peterson and Mr. James J. MacRae, both of Watertown street, West Newton, were married Friday evening by Rev. H. J. Patrick. Both have resided in West Newton for some time and after a short trip will make their home there. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few immediate friends.

The Commissioners of the Nautical Training School of Massachusetts have received a cable from Commander Low, announcing the arrival of the Enterprise at Gibraltar. All well on board.

And now is the elm tree beetle going to become as much of a pest in the Newtons as have been the brown tail and gypsy moths? There are some residents who hope not.

—Rev. A. L. Squier and family returned last week from a month's vacation. On Sunday Rev. Mr. Squier preached before a good sized congregation at the union service held in the Central Congregational church. He will conduct the union services at that edifice again next Sunday. The following Sunday the preacher will be Rev. Dr. Rice and the last Sunday of the month the pulpit will be occupied by Rev. Dr. Dorchester. Rev. Mr. Squier will preach again the first Sunday in September.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Irving, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark W. Gertrude of Boyd street are at Long Beach, Gloucester.

—Mrs. Charles G. Newcomb and son Harold of Pearl street are spending a few weeks with relatives in Caribou, Me.

—Miss Madeline Wayne, of Richardson street, who was seriously injured by a fall while on a visit to Pepperell, Mass., is improving rapidly. Many friends will be happy to learn of this improvement.

CONG. WEEKS AT MEDWAY

agency and when in the administration of John Quincy Adams, a system of internal improvements was under consideration, he stated in a letter written a short time before his death that he considered such a policy on the part of the general government as very nearly sufficient reason for secession and he wrote out a provision which he submitted to friends and to the Virginia legislature to the effect that in future the state legislature should make an express ratification and endorsement of all such acts to indicate that the state had not abrogated its right to control internal improvements within its borders, and that the fact that these improvements were made through the general government was simply an indication of the adoption of this policy without any abrogation of the rights of the state.

On the contrary, the opposition party, under whatever name it may have acted, —Federalists up to 1815 to 1820, between which dates it gradually diminished in numbers and in influence, without name for the next few years, and ultimately, after assuming for a short time the name National Republican, calling itself the Whig party, —followed the teachings of Hamilton and gradually adopted his ideas of government which have since become well established. For instance, in Washington's administration, as I have stated, the treasury policy was inaugurated, the National Bank Act was passed and approved by the Supreme Court, a provisional navy was organized, military forces were provided and in John Adams' administration — a Federalist administration — Congress was called together in extra session in May, 1797 and advised to create a Navy, —the Navy having been up to that time provisional in character, —to fortify our harbors and to organize a military force, war with France being imminent.

THE CENTRALIZING TENDENCY PREVAILS. Bryce in his "American Commonwealth" speaking of the tendency to centralize, says:

"The expansive force of the National Government proved ultimately stronger than the force of the States, so the centralizing tendency prevailed. And it prevailed not so much by the conscious purpose of the party disposed to favor it, as through the inherent elements of strength which it possessed, and the favoring conditions amid which it acted, elements and conditions largely irrespective of either political party, and operative under the supremacy of the one as well as of the other."

In recent years there have been marvellous changes in the practical utilities which the Federal Government is at present partly controlling, so that today it is very doubtful if there is a government in the world where the central authority is stronger than in the United States and we have even gone so far as to delegate to commissions powers which the early advocates of a Democracy would have looked upon with fear and would have certainly opposed and resented. There are various reasons advanced today for the extension of Federal power; it may be in the welfare clause of the Constitution, or it may be in the taxing power of the Constitution, or it may be in the control of interstate commerce; the latter, however, is the probable basis for much of the Legislation which has been enacted within the last five years. We not only are regulating trusts and combinations but we have in a way undertaken to control individual action. When the individual oppresses the weak, when he attempts to perform any act which is not best for the welfare of the Government, or which may be detrimental to the health of the community or to individuals, then the Federal authority takes control of his actions.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.

It is true there have been some functions of Government with which the people have become thoroughly familiar and which have been controlled by the Government greatly to the advantage of all the people — as for instance the Post Office Department, which comes a little closer to all the people than other Governmental functions and it is significant that while the facilities of this department have constantly increased, there has been a gradual decrease in the cost of sending mail to different parts of the country. There are appropriated now for the Postal Service nearly two hundred millions of dollars, forty times as much as was appropriated one hundred years ago, while the cost of sending all kinds of mail matter has decreased in almost a similar ratio and, in addition to the early facilities we have today not only a free delivery in all centers of population, but a similar delivery which has reached out to every section of the country, so that the farmer living in the remotest section receives his mail with similar promptness and without greater expense than he who dwells in the metropolitan district.

SEED DISTRIBUTION.

One of the familiar governmental policies which has largely exceeded in its scope the wildest dreams of its original promoters is the distribution of seed. Its original purpose was, under the welfare clause of the Constitution, to develop additional or better crops by furnishing farmers with seed which could not be obtained elsewhere; this work has been continued and increased, in fact the Agricultural Department is doing a work which was not intended originally forms of paternalism, for it goes to the seed dealer, buys great quantities of seed which can be bought in any seed store and distributes them from one end of the country to the other. An illustration of the ultimate effect of this action was the letter received by one of my colleagues from a woman to whom he had been in the habit of sending garden seed, that the writer did not require seed that year but would like to have the Government send her a piano instead. The result of this kind of centralization produces an effect which is neither desirable from a government standpoint nor even from the standpoint of the individual. The reasoning of the woman referred to was sound; if the Government can properly give away an article of everyday commerce, why can it not extend this gift to any or all articles of commerce, — pianos for instance.

CENTRALIZING TENDENCY IN RECENT LEGISLATION.

It is probably a fact, which even a casual examination would conclusively prove, that no Congress in the history of our Government has ever passed so many important bills and especially so many bills which have extended the application of the powers of the Federal Government. The enumeration of a few will easily demonstrate the correctness of this statement, for among the bills passed were the Rate bill, the Meat Inspection bill, the Pure Food bill, the bill providing for the removal of the tax on denatured alcohol, the Immigration bill and the bill extending Federal control over all quarantine stations and regulations.

It will be impossible in this short paper to go into any considerable details relative to many of these bills, but I wish to take up two or three of them to indicate the tendency in Congress, a tendency which, as I have said, it is reasonable to suppose has behind it the approval of the majority of the people of this country.

THE PURE FOOD BILL.

One of the most important of these legislative acts and one which in my judgment will inure greatly to the benefit of all the people, is the so-called Pure Food Bill, which has been pending in Congress in some form for nearly twenty years and the fact that it has been passed by a very nearly unanimous vote of the 59th Congress, is a sure indication of the trend of public sentiment. There can be no doubt that there has been necessity for such action and that this necessity has been increasing during the years in which the bill has been pending. Its purpose is not to determine what people shall eat or drink, but to enable people to know exactly what they are eating and drinking. Of course it is not proposed to attempt to regulate food or drink prepared in any state and consumed in the same state; much of this business is now regulated by State laws, there being something like twenty states which have already enacted pure food laws, but the Federal law just passed will undoubtedly serve as a model for the states in future, not only for those already having pure food laws, but also for those who may see fit to enact them. By this act it is proposed to compel producers to mark or stamp the articles produced in such a way that those who buy these articles in other states may know the exact ingredients of the combination which they are purchasing. I need make but one illustration, though there are hundreds of them, to show the necessity for this law and I take this one not because it shows a more glaring necessity than many others, but because it will appeal directly to nearly every person present. There are used in the United States yearly about one billion pounds of coffee, none of which is produced here; of this, practically four-fifths is produced in Brazil and the balance in various other countries, but as Brazilian coffee does not sell as well as coffee produced in some other countries, it has been considered desirable by the importers or the sellers of coffee to sell under other names coffee of either a spurious character or Brazilian coffee. It is claimed that there were sold last year in this country 250,000,000 pounds of Java and Mocha, either separately or mixed, while the records of the Custom Houses show that less than 13,000,000 pounds of both brands were actually imported. Therefore it would seem that something like 237,000,000 pounds of coffee, quite likely the larger part of which came from Brazil, were sold under a fictitious name. Probably every housewife here prefers some combination of Java and Mocha coffee and if a poorer article can be sold under that name of course it increases the profits of the person or firm responsible for the fraud, but under the law which has just been passed any person selling coffee as Java and Mocha which is not one or the other or both, may be prosecuted and compelled to pay a heavy penalty; therefore substantially every family in this country will be benefitted in that one item, to say nothing of the thousands of other similar instances which could be given. This is an example of paternalism which seems to me to be justified and which I think will bring distinctly beneficial results, although it increases the importance of Governmental bureaus and considerably increases the expense of conducting the national government.

Another piece of legislation acted upon at the last session of Congress was the Meat Inspection bill. Heretofore, the government has inspected meats and meat products intended for exportation and has annually appropriated money for this purpose. During the past year attention has been called to the packing establishments of the country, especially those in Chicago. A book was recently published entitled "The Jungle", which condemned in unmeasured terms the methods by which the enormous packing business of the country is carried on. There seemed to be sufficient corroboration of these charges to at least warrant the President in calling the matter to the attention of Congress in a special message. It almost goes without saying that the Federal Government has no right to interfere in the business of a packing house, the inspection and killing of animals, or the disposal of the products, provided those products are to be sold inside the borders of the state in which the packing house is located, but a large percentage of all these products are sold in other states and it was urged that there was just as much reason for the protection of the inhabitants of other states, as to protect our foreign trade in the same products. Therefore, the Meat Inspection bill was passed and a $3,000,000 appropriation provided to carry it into effect. This will insure the inspection not only of meat and meat products sent abroad and those used in other states, but also of all products, because it would be impossible, probably, to differentiate between those intended for interstate or foreign commerce and those intended for consumption within the state in which the inspection is made.

The authority for this legislation is the interstate commerce clause of the constitution; but without going into the merits of this law, without admitting or denying that there was ample reason for its enactment, it can be readily seen that any constitutional authority is stretched to the breaking point when the National Government assumes the right to perform the duties of a local board of health in the inspection of a packing house, its sanitary condition and general cleanliness, in order to protect the food which people in other states and foreign countries are to use.

RAILROAD RATE REGULATION.

The development of large sections of our country would have been impossible and the growth of all sections would have been greatly retarded if the steam engine had not been perfected and used to solve transportation difficulties and no better example can be given of the presentation of new problems than in the up-building of our railway systems. In seventy-five years our railroad mileage has increased from the smallest beginning to 212,000 miles; there are more than 1,500,000 people employed in some capacity by steam railroads and last year more than $800,000,000 was paid to these employees in wages or salaries; in a single year these railroads have earned something like $2,000,000,000, and the capital invested in railway securities aggregates about one-ninth of the vested wealth of the United States.

In the beginning all railroads were organized under State laws and generally speaking they were short lines connecting the larger cities and railway mileage and business continued on this, or a similar scale, until after the Civil War, when an act passed Congress providing for the larger requirements of interstate commerce. By that time it had already been demonstrated that there was great waste and delay caused by the necessity of transferring freight and passengers at all connecting points and the act referred to simply provided for the transferring of equipment and freight from one line to another. This was the beginning of what has become a fusion of the many small roads into the half dozen great systems which control a large proportion of the railway mileage of this country.

Naturally such aggregations of capital, such enormous interests, have developed new problems and incidentally many evils too numerous to refer to in detail but the principal ones are excessive rates, rebates and discriminations. These were recognized and in a measure provided for in an act of Congress passed in 1887, establishing the Interstate Commerce Commission; under that act much valuable service has been rendered by that Commission, which has had from the beginning jurisdiction to inquire into and report on the reasonableness of rates in interstate traffic, to decide questions of unjust discrimination, to prescribe that publicity be given to joint tariffs and to institute and carry on proceedings for the enforcement of the provisions of the law.

Many other minor powers are vested in the Commission under this act, but it did not prove strong enough to prevent the giving or receiving of rebates, so in 1903 the so-called Elkins law was passed, which was supposed at that time to be broad enough to meet all questions pertaining to rebates and discriminations. As a matter of fact, the prosecutions which have been conducted during the past year by Attorney-General Moody have demonstrated that this view of the law is correct, for he has obtained twenty-six indictments or convictions against large private corporations or railroad companies for violation of the Elkins law. There have been, however, numerous complaints of excessive rates and other inequalities pressed with much vigor and voiced by the President in two different annual messages; the result being the formulation of what is known as the Hepburn Rate Bill, passed by Congress last Winter. This act increases the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission in many ways, but the most important of these is that it makes the order of the Commission condemning the rate effective, and thereby disposes of that rate, and then authorizes the Commission to name a new rate and put it into operation in place of the condemned one. It authorizes the Commission to compel disagreeing railroads that have nothing in common except a physical connection, to operate jointly, on such rates and terms as it may impose. It dispenses with jury trials in an important class of actions to recover money, by providing a procedure that makes such trials impossible. It imposes extreme and burdensome penalties and as the bill originally passed the House it did not provide for an adequate court review.

There has been common agreement, which exists today, that while railroad conditions and management have been greatly improved by the earlier legislation, there are still and doubtless always will be many evils to remedy and therefore there was no disagreement that some appropriate legislation should be enacted and the great contest which took place in Congress was whether such legislation should be amendatory, allowing the remedies to be worked out in the courts, where all other controversies are settled, or whether the rate making power should be conferred upon and be exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission, without providing for any review. Of course this question hinged on the power of Congress to make rates and, provided it were admitted that Congress had that right, whether that power could be vested in some other body existing under the authority of Congress; in other words, whether the power could be delegated or could not.

There is probably no doubt about the power of the different states to regulate commerce within their borders and my judgment is that there is equal certainty that Congress has the power to regulate rates under the constitutional powers granted it to regulate interstate commerce, but in this instance it must be remembered that the state exercises power because the corporation is the creature of the state, doing business by authority of a charter granted by the state, while Congress gets its authority to act, not because it creates the corporation, but from its general sovereign power to promote the public welfare, etc.; and this point should be carefully differentiated — that the original legislation establishing the Interstate Commerce Commission, simply empowered that Commission to hear complaints as to unreasonable rates, and in case it found the rate unreasonable, it could condemn it and order the railroad to desist from further charging the same, but the Commission had no power to enforce the order and the only remedy it had was to take the dispute to the courts and there secure by judicial decree its enforcement; but the original Hepburn bill, as proposed, not only gave the Commission the power to condemn a rate, but also the additional judicial power to substitute a new rate for the one it had condemned. It can be easily seen from this that we have made tremendous advances in the line of giving a broader construction to the acts of Congress and the powers of Congress under the Constitution, than even those who were active in governmental affairs fifty years ago even dreamed of.

Commission, if the court review powers had not been agreed to by the Senate and House this year, would have had greater power than the Constitution actually conferred either upon Congress itself or upon the President and the possibilities which may come from such assignment of power to seven men may be best illustrated when your attention is called to the fact that the President may at his will remove the members of this Commission, might appoint any number of radical men in their places and practically make railroad rates which would not only be seriously damaging, but would be confiscatory.

MODERATION THE TRUE POLICY FOR THE FUTURE.

The references which I have made are only samples indicating the diversity of matters which have been acted on: there are numerous others which may be controlled in future by Governmental action; one instance will show the character of legislation which has not yet been enacted, but which is already being pushed—this is a bill which provides for the construction of good roads throughout the country—legislation which is similar to our Massachusetts law. I think this bill should not become a law; roads are so largely local in their necessities and use that there cannot, in my judgment, be any excuse for compelling the citizens of Massachusetts to assist in constructing highways in the State of Missouri or in the State of Mississippi, but legislation of this character has a great many earnest advocates.

There are charges made that government as now carried on is, in a way, government by clamor and that Congress has been influenced by noise rather than facts in the acts which it had adopted during the past year; but on the whole, it seems to me that it has responded with intelligence to legitimate public demands. There will be numerous criticisms by yellow sheets edited by yellow fellows that Congress has not done as much as it should in these respects, but such sheets and such men have been attempting and will continue to attempt to discredit constituted authority in nearly every form and I suggest that all citizens investigate vague insinuations and charges which may be made, in which case I feel sure that they can arrive at no other conclusion than that Congress has been at least as radical in the legislation adopted as the facts require.

When we change great public policies when we adopt legislation which is going to affect large proportions of our vested interests and the wages of millions of our citizens, common sense at least demands that any advance be made in a moderate way, testing the effect of legislation, amending and enlarging it if such legislation is found satisfactory or necessary; repeating it if the results are not for the best interests of all the people, and in future, while it may be expected that there will be loud outcries for legislation against corporate and vested interests, as well as against the evils resulting therefrom, I feel sure that the wise and conservative policy will be only to legislate in moderate degrees, carefully testing every new method before proceeding in a course which may be injurious, if not destructive, to business conditions and to the best interests of our country.

No Competition: No Electrification.

To understand Vice President Van Etten's statement that there is no likelihood of an electrical installation on the suburban service of the Boston & Albany Railroad in the near future, one must go back a decade, to the time when the building of new electric lines through the Newtons and in the territory served in part by the Boston & Albany made that road feel the force of competition. The railroad managers, who saw the number of suburban passengers carried on their lines fall off twenty-five per cent, naturally looked to some means of meeting this competition. Two courses were available. A reduction of fares might result in bringing back the traffic, or the company could install an electric service. The difficulty about the former plan was that a reduction of suburban fares made itself felt over the whole line, and the managers are slow to inaugurate generally lower fares. The second plan appeared more promising, because the advantage of an electric equipment lies in the fact that a stationary plant permits the transportation company to utilize ninety per cent of the power in coal, whereas a locomotive can use only fifteen to twenty-five per cent of the power, and great promises were made. Estimates were made upon the cost of equipping the Newton circuit line with electricity, but the difficulties were great and the company could not see how it was to get back, in fares, the two million dollars which it would be compelled to spend to make the change. In the meantime, however, the effect of competition was being felt less each day. At the present time the company has not only recovered the twenty-five per cent of revenues which it lost, but has increased its revenues ten per cent beyond the figures of ten years ago. The situation is such that the Boston & Albany does not need to install an electric service to meet competition.

As a sop to Cerberus the Boston service will get the cars which the popular demand that has forced electrical installation in the New York City terminal, releases from that service. These are practically new, and the antiquated equipment of the "circuit" will be gradually withdrawn. With double-enders engines the company maintains it can improve the service materially at a cost which would be trifling as compared with electric installation. That the revenues on the steam road have been restored in the face of electric competition shows that the railroad possesses advantages in the minds of a large number of people which more than offset the low fares and more frequent service of these electric roads, but it is a question whether ten per cent increase in ten years is keeping pace with the increase in population. The road's decision is also an excellent sidelight on several topics greatly to the fore recently in the Legislature as to the stimulating and invigorating effects of Competition.—Boston Transcript.

Corkery-Maloney

Miss Margaret M. Maloney of this city and Mr. Jeremiah J. Corkery, an electric car conductor living in Boston, were married Friday evening in this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James P. Kelly at the parochial residence of the Church of Our Lady.

MARRIED IN NEWTON

Charlestown Couple Come Here to Be Wedded

Another wedding of an out-of-town couple in this city has just become known by a return of the marriage license. This time the contracting persons were from Charlestown. The groom was Walter F. Phelps of 77 1-2 High street, Charlestown. The license states that he was born in Boston 25 years ago, a son of Charles F. Phelps. He is employed as a fireman in the Boston protective department. The bride was Miss Flora E. Holbrook of 50 Russell street, Charlestown. She is a daughter of John V. Holbrook and was born in Boston 19 years ago. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Henry E. Oxnard, July 17.

HOTTEST ON RECORDNewton Had Sweltering Days This Week*But People Had Cool Subject To Talk About

It was hot in Newton this week!

Monday was pronounced the warmest day in a twelvemonth. Not a few residents did not hesitate to pronounce the weather the most affectionate they could remember for several years. The average of thermometers in many villages Newton during the afternoon was 97 degrees, which is believed to be a mark not known here in several years.

No heat prostrations were reported and no one was removed to the Newton hospital suffering from the summering weather. Not a few residents, however, took the precaution to lay off work during the hottest part of the day. On the streets workhorses showed the effects of the hot wave. It was no uncommon sight to see dogs crawl under the cooling water of the street watering carts.

River Was Popular

The shady nooks along the banks of the Charles river were probably the coolest places in this city. Hundreds of canoeists and visitors frequented the river, which nearly all day was swept by a slight breeze which seemed cool compared with the atmosphere elsewhere. Few canoeists paddled their craft down the river, but hundreds allowed their crafts to drift listlessly in the shade. There were no accidents.

Shortly after 3:30 a brisk shower sent the canoeists ashore quickly. The rain cooled the atmosphere a little, but in the evening the mercury began to climb again until it again hovered around the 90s.

Many others sought the electric car lines running through the picturesque sections of this city as a means of getting temporarily cooled off.

In Forbidden Places

Boys in many parts of the city disregarded the new regulations against bathing in certain ponds and streams. The youths enjoyed bathing for several times to wear proper bathing suits and to hours at a time. They took the precaution to bathe in the forbidden waters when there were no policemen in sight and no one was arrested.

A Cool Subject

Tuesday was also a sweltering one, but at no time during that day did the thermometer reach the record of the previous day. About 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the mercury climbed to 91 in several parts of many villages Newton, but as there was a slight breeze stirring the weather was not so uncomfortable as before.

Although the weather was the hottest for several years, according to the unofficial weather sharps, the residents had a cool subject to talk about in the false weight ice cases.

Overcome in Boston

Miss Polly Cheatham, 30 years old, living at 23 Winter street, Newton Upper Falls, was overcome by the heat while on the Boston Common. She was taken to the relief station of the Boston City Hospital and after receiving treatment was able to return to her home in this city.

WILL FORM UNIONCity Employees Decide to Organize At Once

At a meeting of the city employees of this city held Friday evening it was definitely decided to form a labor union in order to advance the interests of the men. It is expected that within a few more weeks the union will be on a sound footing and running smoothly. When the matter of applying for a charter from the American Federation of Labor came up more than 200 of those present signified their willingness to sign the application. This they did later in the evening and the application for the charter was sent along to the headquarters.

A number of well known labor men spoke. Among them were Frank H. McCarthy, New England organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and D. D. Driscoll, secretary and treasurer of the state branch. Both urged the city employees to form a union for their own interests as quickly as possible.

The next meeting will be held immediately upon the arrival of the charter, when Mr. McCarthy will institute the union.

There is much enthusiasm among the men over the proposed organization. It is believed by the employees that there is a good field for such an organization in this city and that its benefits will begin to be felt at once. It is stated that practically every city employee in a number of the departments will become members.

FLORAL PARADE ON RIVER

Canoeists' Association Sets Aug. 25 As the Date

The canoeists Illumination association, an organization which comprises a large number of the regular devotees of canoeing living in this city and surrounding places, will endeavor to hold its long-looked-forward-to floral parade on the Charles river on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 25. Three times last month the parade was postponed on account of rain, and if the weather is again unfavorable the affair will take place the first pleasant Saturday afternoon following the new date.

The decorated craft will start at Waltham. The line will proceed up the river past Norumbega park and then pass in review before the judges at the Wabawawa Canoe club float near the Metropolitan park police station.

Some valuable and attractive prizes have been offered and a large number of canoeists are planning to enter the affair. The floral parade promises to be one of the most novel affairs yet held by the Charles river canoeists. The expense of the affair will be met by popular subscription to a considerable extent.

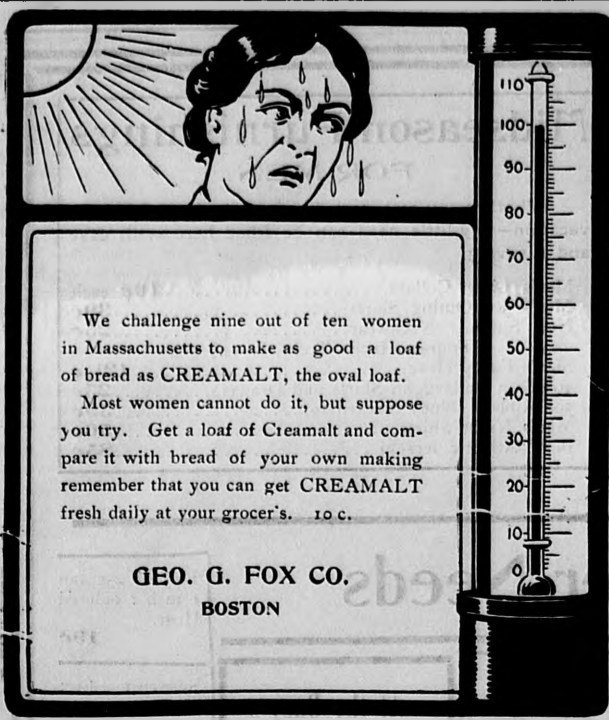

TO REPUBLICANS:

We are anxious to have every Republican in close touch, and working in harmony with the Republican National Congressional Committee in favor of the election of a Republican Congress.

The Congressional campaign must be based on the administrative and legislative record of the party, and, that being so, Theodore Roosevelt's personality must be a central figure and his achievements a central thought in the campaign.

We desire to maintain the work of this campaign with popular subscriptions of One Dollar each from Republicans. To each subscriber we will send the Republican National Campaign Text Book and all documents issued by the Committee.

Help us achieve a great victory.

SHOOT CRAPS ON SUNDAY

Convicted of gaming on the Lord's day four Nonantum men were fined $5 each yesterday, and a default warrant was issued for another who failed to appear after being summoned.

The men were Jeremiah A. Philpot, Thomas Flaherty, Stephen Morrill, Alex. Chaisson and Arthur Bergin. Bergin was the one who defaulted.

Patrolman Condrin testified that these men gathered in a doorway of a mill on Chapel street Sunday afternoon and shot craps.

—After an illness of not quite two weeks, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Hill of Pine Ridge road, died Tuesday morning of ptomaine poisoning. Up to his fatal sickness he had been perfectly well and the resulting physical condition made him withstand the disease longer than was thought possible, but the oppressive heat worked against his recovery. A simple funeral service was held at his home on Thursday afternoon only the intimate friends being present.

THREE ICEMEN ARE FINED

when I received my second bill I found the price had been advanced to 40 cents."

Mr. Miller was called to the stand. He identified the "score" card. The card said nothing about the 40 cent rate. When questioned by the judge Mr. Miller replied that he "could have stated on the cards that less than 100 pounds taken at a time would be charged at the rate of 40 cents per 100," but that he did not think that necessary.

"How is the customer supposed then to know the price," asked the court.

Mr. Miller was unable to solve the puzzle.

Can't Get Students

"The cards delivered to the customers upon which the weights are put down as deliveries are made do not always compare with books kept at the office," added Mr. Miller, "sometimes the ice men do not put down the figures. We can not get students to drive ice carts," asserted Mr. Miller. Then, as an aside remark, he added: "Ice men are not perfect any more than other persons."

Miss Jennie Cottrell, employed by Mr. Mahoney, testified that she saw Cameron bring in the ice and mark down the weight as 50 pounds. The chest had just been cleaned out and she saw the two policemen weigh the ice. She saw Cameron wash the cake on the side piazza.

Cameron was called to the stand. He remembered delivering ice to the Mahoney house July 19 and recalled that he did not weigh the cake. "I estimated the weight," he asserted.

"I did not intend to put down on the card a larger amount than I delivered," said he. "I washed the cake and that caused it to shrink some."

In his argument Mr. Proctor asserted that a customer may have his ice weighed upon request and if the iceman refuses he is liable to a penalty. "The ice was not weighed and so there was no false weight given," he claimed.

Suburbanites Have Troubles

City Solicitor Slocum argued that when the iceman put down 50 pounds on the card as the amount alleged delivered and the fact that he admitted afterward he had given light weight brought the case within the statutes.

"Suburbanites can not remain at home to watch the iceman," said he.

The case of Stiles D. Hayes, 29 years old, employed by the same concern, who last week entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of delivering false weight July 19 to Arthur W. Tarbell, editor of a magazine published in Boston, who lives on Standish street, Newton Highlands. It was alleged that he delivered two pieces of ice which together weighed but 44 pounds and asserted they weighed 60. Patrolman Marriner testified to seeing the card marked 60 pounds and receiving the cakes with patrolman O'Halloran. One weighed 26 and the other 18 pounds.

Miss Margaret Mulgany, who is employed by Mr. Tarbell at his house, testified to seeing the iceman bring in a cake and break it into two pieces. She saw the card marked 60 pounds. She saw the patrolmen weigh the two pieces. She said there were three small pieces in the chest before the iceman came.

Hayes was put upon the stand. He asserted he weighed the ice on the wagon and that it tipped the scales at 60 pounds. He used a pair of scales he had procured only two days before. He said he washed the ice and split it into three pieces and that this probably decreased the weight.

Bran New Scales

Cross-examined he said he had procured new scales from George E. Miller, son of George D. Miller, in order that he might give his customers correct weight, although there was nothing wrong with the matter with the old scales. George E. Miller corroborated this testimony.

Mr. Tarbell testified to seeing three pieces of ice in the chest, two of which were placed there by Hayes.

In argument of this case lawyer Proctor asserted the police had left a big loophole as they were careless in weighing the ice. He asserted that the day was a warm one and that the water used in washing the ice was warm. This, he thought, must have decreased the weight.

Mr. Proctor then filed motions to quash the cases against Cameron and Hayes.

"The method of carrying on the ice business is somewhat peculiar," declared Judge Kennedy in summing up the several cases. "The ordinary customer depends almost entirely upon the honesty of the iceman."

System Peculiar

"The system of keeping track of the deliveries is peculiar. Although the men have been given scales and cards they have simply guessed at the weight. They have asserted that nearly all the other icemen have done the same. The dealers ought to look after their delivery men more sharply."

"Ice put into refrigerators in many cases is not weighed, but is charged up by guess. There is no more reason why ice should be delivered that way than butter, groceries or anything else."

"The consumer believed he was buying ice by actual weight and not by guess work."

Fines of $10, the maximum under the statutes, were then imposed upon John C. Robb, whose case was threshed out last week; William Cameron and Stiles D. Hayes. Through lawyer Proctor

WORE PANTS TO BEDBoron Put $600 Russian Money in Pocket*Before He Woke His Cousin Decamped With Bills

Sleeping with his pants on proved a costly experience for Martin Boron, who lives in the rear of 200 Concord street, Newton Lower Falls, and delayed his proposed trip to his old home in Russia.

Martin Friday appeared as a complainant in the municipal court against his cousin, Wladyslaw Boron, who was charged with larceny of $600 from the former. After the case had been threshed out Wladyslaw was held in two sureties of $300 each for the grand jury.

For many months Martin had been saving his money in order to return to his old home in Russia. He accumulated some $600 and late last week had the money changed into Russian currency.

Returning home to Newton Lower Falls he told his cousin, who lives in the same house, what a large sum the little fortune made in Russian money. The two sat up late that evening while Martin related how he would surprise his relatives in Russia when he reached home with more money than he had ever before possessed. Testimony brought out the assertion that Wladyslaw finally proposed that they celebrate his cousin's good fortune and procured some whiskey. With the encouragement of Wladyslaw it was asserted, Martin indulged not wisely but too well, and finally became drowsy.

Martin said that he took off his shoes and a few outer clothes, but went to bed with his pants on. He took a last look at the $600 in Russian bills, put them in a big pocketbook and shoved it into his pants pocket.

When he woke up in the morning, Martin continued, the money was missing. He immediately suspected his cousin, who had slept in the same bed. Martin reported the loss to the police and a still hunt for the Russian bills was begun.

Wladyslaw was questioned but he at first denied all knowledge of the missing bills. Finally he admitted to Martin and a friend named Michael Krawz, it was asserted, that he had hid the money in the house.

With patrolman Martin Neagle, the men went to the house off Concord street. After searching a little while they found the bills tucked between a window and a board and covered over with ashes. Martin was elated over the finding of his lost money and visions of the surprise he would create when he reached his old home came back to him.

After hearing the stories of the affair the next morning, Judge Kennedy held Boron for the grand jury.

Martin bade his farewell. He now intends to start back to Russia within a few days.

SUICIDE IN WELLESLEYFormer Lower Falls Woman Drank Bottle of Chloroform

A former Newton Lower Falls young woman, Mrs. Maude Henry, wife of Dr. Edward E. Henry of Wellesley Hills, committed suicide in that town Friday night because of despondency over family difficulties.

Having been refused admittance to her former home, after having been separated from her husband for about six months, Mrs. Henry rode about Wellesley and a considerable distance down Washington street into Newton. As the depot carriage returned to Wellesley Hills she asked Frank Crossman, the driver, for a glass of water. While he was procuring this she drank a large quantity of chloroform. Turning to the driver she remarked that she would soon be a fit subject for a hearse. Whipping up his horse Crossman drove her as quickly as possible to her husband's house, where doctors worked over her for several hours. Late in the evening she was removed to the Natick hospital, where she sank slowly until death came the following morning.

Mrs. Henry was 24 years old. She was a daughter of the late William Train, who resided for many years on Washington street, just over the Wellesley line in the Lower Falls district, for many years. She was married to Dr. Henry, son of Mr. Charles C. Henry of Wellesley Hills, about five years ago. Last winter they separated and Dr. Henry kept their three-year-old child, Florence. Mrs. Henry stayed in Boston for a few weeks and later was taken to the Westboro Insane Hospital for treatment. The day she returned to Wellesley Hills she made an unsuccessful effort to get into her former home to see her husband and little daughter.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon at the residence of Dr. Henry. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Mr. Turk of the Natick Congregational church, and the remains were taken to the Natick cemetery and placed in a tomb.

THROWN INTO RIVERSaved From Drowning To be Arrested*Hoel's Companion Swam Ashore And Ran Away

After a peculiar experience the first arrest this season for drunkenness on the Auburndale reservation of the Metropolitan park system was made Sunday afternoon. The victim was a Waltham man who had a strenuous time before he finally landed in the station near the Weston bridge.

August Hoel of 83 Crescent street, Waltham, with a middle-aged man, was paddling up the river in a canoe, and when near the bank near the Newton and Waltham lines the craft overturned. Michael Bowen of Waltham hurried in a canoe to the side of Hoel, who was trying to secure a hold on his own craft, and rescued him. Hoel's companion swam the short distance to the bank and ran away.

Hoel was pulled into Bowen's canoe. Park officer Ryan then arrested him on a charge of drunkenness. He spent the night in the Waltham police station and the following morning was released.

The fine weather brought out an unusually large number of canoeists. A band concert at Fox Island was one of the prime attractions of the afternoon. In the early evening there was a sudden drop in the thermometer, which made canoeing too cool for pleasure and caused the crowd to quickly thin out.

The day was not without its usual tip-overs, but fortunately none of these accidents proved serious. A young man and young woman were capsized near the Concord-street bridge about 6 o'clock, but reached the bank unaided. Two men and two women overturned from canoes during the afternoon and managed to reach the bank with little difficulty.

Two young men walked off one of the boat house floats at Auburndale while watching the canoeists paddle back and forth. All these persons sought the drying rooms of Metropolitan park police station. After drying out they left for their homes, apparently none the worse for their experiences.

RESIDENCE RANSACKEDThieves Went Through Mt. Ida House But Secured Little

A break in the house of Mr. Charles J. Bailey, the well-known Boston rubber goods manufacturer, on Sussex road, in the Mt. Ida district, was discovered Sunday afternoon by a neighbor who had been given a key to the dwelling while the family was away.

As a result of a long search of the house made Sunday afternoon it was found that the thieves had been through the residence from the cellar to the attic. Entrance was gained by breaking a small window on the second story in the rear after climbing a small roof extending even with the second story windows. After breaking one of the smaller windows the sash was forced up. Marks of a jimmy were found in various roofs.

The family had left the previous Wednesday for a vacation at Boothbay Harbor, Me., and nearly all the silverware had been placed in storage. A number of pieces were found about the lower part of the house, however, and it is believed that a number of personal effects of various members of the family were stolen. Word was sent to the family and Monday Mr. Bailey returned and went over the house. So far as it was able to determine nothing of any great value was stolen. The bulkhead door was found unlocked and it is believed that when the thieves had searched the house to their content that they made their escape through the cellar.

Tuesday, September 4th, is the day when the Fall Term will begin at Burdett College, Boston's Active Training School for business. The day when hundreds of New England youth will start on the road to success. As large as Burdett College is, it is unable to prepare enough bookkeepers and stenographers to supply the constant demand made through its Situation Department, by business men for its graduates. We all have enough of the business instinct in us to make us admire the go-ahead spirit of this College, one which is rightly designated as "The School that Satisfies." President Burdett offers the reasonable rate of $37.50 per term.

TEN MONTHS' TRIPDr. F. E. Clark Home From Foreign Tour*Father of Christian Endeavor Reports Much Progress

After a trip lasting 10 months in which he visited many countries in continental Europe, Asia and Great Britain and attended a large number of meetings and conventions of Christian Endeavor organizations, Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark has returned to his home, 379 Central street, Auburndale.

Saturday he arrived in Boston on the Republic. He will now again take up his work in this country.

Rev. Dr. Clark is widely known as the father of the Christian Endeavor movement, and holds the office of president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union. He left for abroad last October and visited many countries in continental Europe, Asia and touched in Africa.

To a reporter Dr. Clark related the following story of his experiences when seen at his Auburndale home:

"The whole tour I took has indeed been delightful and encouraging. We received the best treatment everywhere and I found that Christian Endeavor is spreading rapidly all over Europe. Every European country has its society now and the outlook has never been so bright as it is at present.

"I must say, however, that I am glad to get home once more. Where societies have been established in Europe the only country offering opposition is Turkey. Especially is this true of the interior of that country, although there was no opposition to me personally. Christian Endeavor is a forbidden name by the Sultan, and the work that is being done by the societies in Turkey must be accomplished secretly. There are already fifty societies in Turkey, and the workers are enthusiastic in the cause.

"Conditions are quite different in Armenia, where I met an Armenian Patriarch, the head of the church, and who expressed a great interest in the Christian Endeavor work.

"The last meeting I attended while abroad was the world's convention of Christian Endeavor Societies at Geneva. A very unique service was carried on in twelve different languages, each man saying the same thing in his own language at the same time. There were representatives of thirty different countries present.

"Two weeks ago tomorrow I was asked to preach in St. Peter's church in Geneva, and I did so, choosing as my subject 'John Calvin.' There were about 1,000 persons present who could understand the English language, among them being 300 Americans and 300 persons from Great Britain.

"I visited Germany, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Bulgaria, Hungary, Turkey, Armenia and Montenegro. In every country the progress of Christian Endeavor is exceedingly satisfactory. I was greatly encouraged with the way the Hungarians are taking to Christian Endeavor. They are wonderfully enthusiastic in their devotion to the cause. Two years ago there were no Christian Endeavor societies in Hungary, while today there are twenty-two, and each of them in a most flourishing condition.

"Even more encouraging is the advance made by the cause of Christian Endeavor in Norway, where there are now forty societies. Just one year ago there were none in that country. In Sweden there are 400 societies with 20,000 members. Great Britain, of course, comes next to the United States in strength of the societies. There are about 10,000 societies in Great Britain and there are at least a half a million members. I made a trip through Great Britain about fifteen years ago and the advance made by the cause of Christian Endeavor is nothing less than marvelous."

PLAYED GOOD SAMARITANBrought Coffee to Prisoner and was Locked up Himself

Bringing a cup of coffee to a friend who had been locked up for drunkenness Sunday caused Oliver of West Newton, to be locked up on a similar charge himself.

Oliver walked into police headquarters about 8 A. M., carrying a pot of steaming hot coffee. He saluted Capt. John Ryan and asked if he might give the coffee to a friend held for drunkenness who was about to eat his breakfast. This was an unusual request but it was cheerfully granted. After playing the part of a good samaritan the man became troublesome, it was alleged, and he was gently but firmly told to go home. Refusing to go home or to keep quiet he was held on a charge of drunkenness. After sobering up he was released.

An automobilist who named his machine the "Wire Girl" says he did so because the park police keep their eyes on it all the time.

The killing of a policeman in Newton
by a live wire in the streets emphasizes anew the need of having all wires underground. Newton is a rich and popular town and should be up to the fashion of modern cities in having all wires,
electric and telephone, in conduits underground. Brookline tolerates them, too, shamefully. I heard people talking today that any town ought to be made to pay heavily in damages for permitting such deadly forces free play in the public streets.

The above comment by the Looker On in the Boston Record, shows how little the average person knows of municipal work. The Looker On might not have been so free with his criticism had he known that the corporations using wires
in Newton are under contract with the city authorities to expend, one at least $10,000 yearly for five years and the other to expend $100,000 in five years in underground construction. With 139
miles of accepted streets in a rambling
city like Newton, the above contracts speak volumes for the foresight of our city fathers.

An interesting possible aftermath of the ice agitation is the probable increase in price if the dealers are strictly required to weigh each piece as it is delivered. One local dealer has estimated that it would take one team three hours longer to cover its route than under present conditions, and the necessary increase in the number of teams and men required to cover the city would be added to the price of ice. It is also interesting to learn that one teamster who has usually run about one thousand pounds
of waste per day has run up as high as three thousand pounds daily since the police investigation. This is said to be caused by the over weight given through fear of being unwittingly caught with light measure. It would therefore seem that the public must either run the risk of light weight in its ice service or bear
the increased expense caused by more careful methods.

The article about band concerts we print in another column concerns a matter which should be carefully investigated by our representatives at the State House. From the plea that the public must be furnished with sweet music to that of providing free lunches is but a step and we have no doubt but what plenty of advocates of municipal refreshments could be found, provided the metropolitan district footed the bills.

The Middlesex County Commissioners have formally announced their apportionment of representatives for the next ten years and Newton as stated last week, is allotted three, 31 districts have been formed in the county with 48 representatives and with the same degree of care in the selection of candidates as in the past, Newton can and will be adequately represented at the State House
for the next decade.

The editor is making a careful analysis of the twenty eight voluminous tables contained in Bulletin 50 of the Census Bureau, and which has given our city
the notoriety of being at the head of the per capita public debt of the whole country. The citizens of Newton are entitled to an explanation of the figures, which we believe will greatly modify the present feeling on the matter.

The appointment of medical inspectors by the Board of Health for daily inspection of school children will be hailed with satisfaction by the Newton Education Association, which has done
yeoman work in agitating this subject.
The GRAPHIC still maintains that the actual inspection will be done by the teachers and that the expense of the inspection is a waste of public money.

School Gardens

The Nonantum Vacation School which has been largely attended this season has interested over one hundred children in gardening and the little plots of cultivated land on Jackson road have had constant care and attention during the past few weeks. Next Friday afternoon at three o'clock, the children's work will be inspected and judged by prominent citizens and prizes awarded for the best garden. The public are invited to be present on this interesting occasion.

WINS SCHOLARSHIP

Newton Young Man Gets - Another at Teek.

Denison K. Bullens Takes 2nd Since Leaving Newton High

Because of excellence in his work Mr.
Denison K. Bullens, the 19-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Bullens of 52 Bennington street, Newton, has just been awarded the half-scholarship in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology
for the First Middlesex senatorial district. The award was made under the supervision of the state, being one of 66
half and seven whole scholarships awarded this year.

There were no less than 145 applicants for the scholarships, nearly every one of whom stood high in his studies.
This is the second scholarship which young Mr. Bullens has won since leaving graduated from the Newton high school, having taken a scholarship of $125
offered by Technology itself last year.

Denison K. Bullens is a native of Newton. He is the younger son of Mr.
and Mrs. A. N. Bullens, another son be-

D. K. BULLENS.

ing Mr. Albert S. Bullens. He attended the Bigelow grammar school and was graduated from the Newton high school
in the class of 1905, being one of 30 pupils to win a place on the roll of honor for excellence in studies. He was a member of the scientific course. After being graduated from the local high school he went directly to Technology, completing his first year there last spring. In the institute he is taking a course in mining engineering, and in addition to this is taking two optional studies which will mean practically six years' work to be accomplished in a space of four years.

During a part of the summer Mr. Bullens was stationed at a zinc mine in Cherryfield, Me., where he studies the local mining conditions as they existed
in the eastern part of Washington county.

Mr. Bullens is well known to the attendants of Grace Episcopal church. For some little time he has acted as secretary of the choir, in which he has sung ever since he was nine years old. His voice is an excellent second bass. He was at one time the smallest member of the choir,
and at another time he was the leader.

He has received many congratulations
in the last few days from former schoolmates and from friends generally throughout the city upon his good fortune in winning another scholarship.

AT G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT

Only one member of Charles Ward Post 62, G. A. R., of this city is in attendance at the annual encampment at Minneapolis, acting Adj.-Gen. W. A.
Weatherbee having left Saturday with the delegation which went from Boston.

Mr. Weatherbee has for many years been a member of the local post. For many years he made his home in Newton, but for the last few years has resided in Boston, serving for some little time as acting adjutant-general of the department of Massachusetts.

Miss Catherine Flood, daughter of Mr.
John Flood of this city, left Saturday
as one of the delegates-at-large from the Massachusetts department of the Daughters of Veterans. This is the third encampment which Miss Flood has attended, she having been a delegate to that at Denver last year and the one held a few years ago in Cleveland.
Word was received the middle of the week announcing her safe arrival in Minneapolis.

Mr. John Flood, a well known member of the local post, had planned to attend the encampment, but at the last moment other affairs detained him.

MAD DOG SCARE

A dog, a valuable hound, having exhausted in the street in Dorchester, covered with mud and to all appearances
without a meal for a week, gave residents of Waldeck street, that place, a "mad dog" scare Friday. The dog was owned by Mr. G. I. Nolen of Nonantum street, Newton.

After the Dorchester police had been called out to keep the dog from biting people a patrolman finally ventured to pick up the animal and take it to a station. Here a physician looked over the animal and found that it was suffering from indigestion. He gave the dog some medicine. Mr. Nolen was notified of the animal's condition.

Fire at Nonantum

Boys with matches are supposed to have caused the fire about 8:30 last night in the old stable on the Stearns estate off Watertown street, Nonantum.
An alarm was sent in from box 24. The building was damaged to the extent of $10.

GEO. E. MARSH DEAD

Harvard Man Stricken - Suddenly

Death Takes Away Several Other Residents

Mr. George E. Marsh, Jr., aged 40, a graduate of Harvard in the class of 1888
and senior classical master in the Pingry school at Elizabeth, N. J., died suddenly Wednesday at the home of his parents,
Mr. and Mrs. George E. Marsh of 296
Lake avenue, Newton Highlands.

Mr. Marsh was two years ago stricken with apoplexy, but had made a partial recovery. Early in the summer he came to Newton Highlands.

After being graduated from Harvard
he taught in the Boston Latin school,
later in the Portland, Me., high school
and for the last six years had held the position of senior classical master of the Pingry school in Elizabeth.

Mr. Marsh was a native of Haverhill.
Besides a mother and father he is survived by two brothers, Walter R. Marsh of Elizabeth N. J., and Charles A.
Marsh, a teacher in the Pawtucket, R. I., high school.

CAUGHT UP A TREE

Trespassers at Chestnut Hill Caused Annoyance

Caught in the branches of an old apple tree on the estate of Sumner B. Hinckley off Commonwealth avenue, Chestnut Hill, Benjamin Suchovitsky, 23 years old living at 25 Auburn street, Boston, and Louis Weisman, 16, of 22 Wall street, Boston, were Monday arraigned in court
on a charge of trespass.

The young men were convicted and were fined $5 each. They were given a warning to keep off other persons' land hereafter.

For a long time the residents of Chestnut Hill in the vicinity of the reservoir have been troubled by large numbers of visitors coming out to the place every Sunday and committing nuisances upon their estates. Large quantities of fruit in private orchards in the vicinity is now beginning to ripen and in the last week or two many of the trees have been robbed of their fruit by the wholesale.
Other residents say that visitors have nearly every Sunday trampled through flower beds and over broad lawns.

DIED ON ELECTRIC CAR

Woman was Taking her Baby Home When it Passed Away

Unwilling to leave her infant daughter in the Newton hospital because she could not stand the thought of leaving it Mrs.
Julia Sawyer of 38 Witherell street, Newton Upper Falls, started home with the baby Wednesday afternoon. The child died in its mother's arms on an electric car on Washington street.

Patrolman Taffe assisted the woman to the police station, where she was made as comfortable as possible. Medical Examiner West viewed the body of the infant and ordered it turned over to an undertaker.

The baby had been under treatment at the hospital for several days. Wednesday afternoon its mother went to the hospital and announced her intention of taking the child home. Effort to persuade her to let it remain in the hospital was fruitless.

CHAPELL CAUGHT

Newton Man had Escaped from West- boro last Spring

William G. Chapell, the 44-year old Centre street man who escaped from the Westboro insane hospital last April and who has been wandering around New England since, was caught near his home Wednesday night by Patrolmen Farrell and Coady.

Yesterday afternoon the man was returned to the Westboro institution.

Early last November Chapell called at the Newton hospital to see his wife, who was ill there. She refused to see him, saying that she was afraid of him. Chapell then drew a knife on Dr. Waters, the house physician. He was arrested for disturbance and assault. When the case was called in court he was placed on trial to determine his sanity. His counsel asserted this could not then be done,
so the man was tried for assault and was sentenced to the house of correction.
He appealed, but the superior court upheld the sentence of the local court and sent the man back here to undergo an examination. Drs. Lowe and Utley pronounced him insane and the man was committed to Westboro.

Chapell, it is said, was once swindled out of some property on Cape Cod. This is said to have pried upon his mind until he became mentally unbalanced.

Chapell gained considerable notoriety
here about a year ago by trying to form
a stock company of 12 for the purpose of buying a cow. He planned to take care of the animal himself and to supply
the other stockholders with milk as dividends. The plan would not work, he found.

Official Moves to Waban

First Assistant Postmaster General
Frank H. Hitchcock, whose headquarters have been in Washington, has moved his family to this city. Mr. Hitchcock has rented a house in Waban, where he intends to make his home permanently.
He was in town for a short stay the first of the week, but left immediately upon postoffice matters which will take him to several parts of the country before he returns again to his new home.

DOG WAS MAD

Attacked Chestnut Hill - Woman on Street

Animal had been Complained of by Neighbors

A dog which was being taken to court
where its owner was going to exhibit it in a case charging Charles Field, a well known resident of Chestnut Hill, with keeping a dangerous animal, became mad at the corner of Commonwealth avenue and Washington street, Auburn-dale, Wednesday morning and attacked
Mrs. Field.

Patrolman Joseph H. Seaver, who was riding on an electric car, started to the assistance of the woman, as did also Robert McCullom, a Newton Center iceman.
As the dog sprang at Patrolman Seaver
he put a shot into the animal's left temple and killed the dog instantly.

Mrs. Field left her home on Waban Hill road shortly before 8 with the intention of bringing the dog, about which complaints had been made, to court in order that it might be determined just what was the matter with the animal.
She was accompanied by a maid. Alighting at Washington street the dog became troublesome and Mrs. Field finally had to tie him to a telephone pole. The dog did not take kindly to this confinement and began to jump about in a wild manner, snapping right and left.

When Patrolman Seaver rode past on an electric he noticed that the animal was acting strangely. He started to the assistance of the woman, but before he reached her side Mr. McCullom, the iceman, started to quiet the dog.

The animal made a jump at Mrs.
Field and set its teeth in the back of her jacket. With unusual presence of mind Mrs. Field threw open her coat as the dog jumped and succeeded in shaking him off.

The iceman then grabbed the animal and Patrolman Seaver got the chain attached to the dog's collar about its neck with the intention of choking it. The dog managed to wiggle away.

Retreating a few feet the dog made a dash at Patrolman Seaver. As the animal jumped the patrolman sent a bullet
from his revolver into the animal's left temple. It killed him instantly. The dog was a mongrel of buff color and weighed about 30 pounds.

When the case against Mr. Field was called in court half an hour later his counsel suggested that the case ought to be dropped as the animal in question
had been killed.

Mrs. Lillian Dowsie, a neighbor, testified that on July 3 her little daughter, Helen Dowsie, had been bitten by the dog while playing. She asserted that the animal bit her in the chest and tore her clothes. Other neighbors testified that the dog had bothered them while they were gathering mushrooms at Chestnut Hill.

When Mr. Field was called to the stand by Associate Justice Bacon he stated that he had kept the animal shut up in the house, letting him out only when there was someone on hand to attend to him.

"The dog had a fondness for playing with people's shoe strings and for biting ends of ropes," said Mr. Field, "but I never knew him to be vicious."

A fine of $5 for keeping a dangerous dog was imposed upon Mr. Field. He paid.

Hall-Davis

Miss Eliza G. Davis, daughter of Mr.
Herbert S. Davis of Nehoiden road,
and Mr. Arthur W. Hall of Parsons street, West Newton, were married Wednesday by Rev. H. J. Patrick. The ceremony took place in the presence of only immediate relatives. After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Hall will make their home in West Newton.

Explosion at Upper Falls

A slight fire occurred early last evening in the fireworks factory of the Marston & Wells Fireworks Manufacturing company at Newton Upper Falls. The blaze was caused by a small explosion
in that part of the plant given over to the manufacturing of Roman candles.
An alarm was sent in from box 64 and by quick work the firemen kept the damage down to $25.

Base Ball.

By a single run the Newton Y. M. C.
A. baseball team lost to the Jamaica A.
A. team of Jamaica Plain Saturday afternoon, 9 to 10. The contest was a well played and interesting one. The game was a veritable pitchers' battle from start to finish and many spectators gathered about the Cabot Park diamond to watch the contest.

The Y. M. C. A. aggregation scored two runs in the second inning and added
five more in the third, and remained in the lead up to the sixth. The visitors were unable to get around the bases until the fourth, when five men were sent home. The Jamaicas secured the lead in the sixth, the Y. M. C. A.'s got it back in the seventh and by scoring two runs in the ninth the visitors won out by one run.

Nelson and Wharton were the battery for the Y. M. C. A. team, while for the Jamaicas the battery was Houle and Cady. Newton made eight hits and five errors, while Jamaica made 11 hits and eight errors.

In a well played contest the St. Mary's of Newton Upper Falls defeated the Victors of that village, 11 to 10, Saturday afternoon on the Upper Falls diamond. The features were the pitching and catching of Fisher and Yates of the winning team. Estelle pitched a good game for the losing team, and J. Duvall caught well. The winners made 11 hits and two errors, while the losers made eight hits and four errors. The game was watched by a large crowd of spectators.

NEWTON'S BIG DEBT

Census Bureau Reports it Largest Per Capita

Figures Based on Year 1904
Now Probably Smaller

The statement sent out by the census bureau this week that of 151 cities in the country having over 30,000 population, Newton has the largest per capita net debt of $125.58, being even larger than New York or Boston, created much speculation in this city. These figures were based on reports for the year 1904, but it is expected that when the figures for the present year are made up Newton will fall from this place at the head of the list.

Mayor Warren said that in the last two years the debt of this city has fallen some $850,000 and that this will have much to do with lowering the per capita net debt. He added that Newton will not be put back at the head of the list during his administration if he can help it. There are no unusually large or special bonds that will have to be issued this year so far as is known at present.

At the office of the assessors it was stated that there is a good prospect of further reduction of the debt if no more large bonds have to be issued.

The exact figures were not at hand at the office of City Treasurer Newhall, but it was stated that there would undoubtedly be a reduction of the per capita debt. Since the figures were reported to the census bureau there has been a material increase in population.

These hot days have been a strong argument in favor of a public swimming pool situated at, say—well at Newtonville! How would the Gov. Claflin estate do for a site?

Metropolitan Band Concerts.

Most successful, in the opinion of the Metropolitan Park Commission, has been the series this season of popular band concerts for the masses who frequent various sections of the great district making up the Metropolitan system of parks. It may be recalled that in this matter the commissioners are acting under chapter 375 of the Acts and Resolves of 1906, which is as follows:

"The Metropolitan Park Commission is hereby authorized and directed to provide in the year 1906 band concerts at such parks, beaches and reservations within its jurisdiction as it may select, and may expend for this purpose a sum not exceeding $15,000, which shall be included in the annual appropriation for maintenance of said parks, beaches and reservations."

Under this authority, the commissioners studied the situation to determine how they could best use the appropriation for the amusement and entertainment of the greatest number of people. Experience and observation have shown in the past that at this midsummer season the beaches are visited by a far larger number than are the wooded or inland sections of the district. The Charles River section of the system, the Blue Hills Reservation and the Middlesex Fells are much visited in the spring season, and also in the fall, as compared with the beaches, and when the warm weather begins the general tide of pleasure and health seekers turns to the water front, so it is found, and at the various beaches the thousands congregate. Throngs, of course, continue to visit the inland sections; yet, in far less numbers than at the shore resorts.

On this basis of where the most people gather for recreation, the commission determined, under the authority given it, to provide music at Nantasket Beach, Revere Beach and at the Lynn end of Nahant Beach, near the State Bathhouse on this reservation. Study of the matter showed that it would be possible to give band concerts at Nantasket and at Revere every afternoon and every evening from the last of June, when the concerts were inaugurated, until into September, certainly until after Labor Day. Concerts have, therefore, been given twice daily at both of these beach reservations, rain or shine, and including also Sundays. The musicians are under cover, so that even a hard shower does not interfere with their playing, and at both resorts thousands of people can find shelter from rain, and the music, therefore, has gone on without interruption on account of weather conditions, and splendid programmes have been enjoyed by the masses.

At the Lynn Beach reservations there have been weekly concerts each Friday afternoon and again in the evening, unless the weather prevented. Here the musicians are not as well sheltered and there is not the same advantage for the people as at the other places, therefore on occasion it has been necessary to postpone concerts, making up for this on another day. Different bands are employed at each of these three beaches.

The Metropolitan Park Commission, in seeking to provide music for the public, first tried to secure an appropriation of $25,000, a sum which was reduced to $15,000 when the bill actually was passed. With a larger appropriation than that of this year, better results could be gained, so the commissioners feel, and the work could be extended. At the office of the commission it is said that if equal facilities for enjoyment of music are to be afforded for all parks and reservations in the district, as eventually may be provided, it is evident that a much larger appropriation is needed.

Lawyer Gets All Auburndale
Woman's Property

After a contest which lasted for nearly a year, the will of Miss Georgie M. Harris, who died at Auburndale, Oct. 23, 1905, leaving all her property to Samuel L. Bailen, a young Boston attorney, was allowed in the Supreme court Tuesday by Judge Loring. District Attorney George A. Sanderson and Judge John C. Kennedy, for the nine second cousins who contested the will, and Frank Leveroni, who has lately been appointed assistant judge of the Juvenile Court by Governor Guild, appeared for Bailen.

The case, which has been fought ever since the will was offered for probate last October, was carried to the Supreme Court, since it was urged that Miss Harris, who met Bailen while he was employed at the Adams House in Connelley's ticket office, was of unsound mind. It developed in the course of the trial that none of the contestants had ever seen Miss Harris, her brother or her mother, while only one had seen her father, and that was about seventy-six years ago.

The estate is valued at about $30,000. Mr. Bailen, who is 24 years of age, is a law partner of Judge Leveroni, who conducted his case, and is a graduate of the Boston University Law School, having attended the school after working at Connelley's ticket office for a number of years.

KILLED BY LIVE WIRE

Patrolman Furdon Was Removing Source
Of Danger

Aid Quickly at Hand Failed To Revive Life on Sunday

While trying to pull away a broken telephone wire which he thought was endangering the safety of pedestrians, Patrolman William H. Furdon, aged 25, one of the youngest members of the police department of this city, was killed by electric shock on Washington street, Hunnewell hill, about 6.30 Sunday night, dying instantly.

The wire with which Furdon came in contact was hanging directly over the sidewalk and all who passed without seeing it were exposed to severe injury.

It is thought that he realized the wire was a live one, but that he believed that it should be removed. In performing this duty he lost his life. He was seen to fall by several residents of the immediate vicinity and by an unknown automobilist, who speeded to a doctor's house to summon medical assistance. The man was beyond help when assistance reached him, long effort to produce respiration proving of no avail.

Just Gone on Duty

Furdon reported for roll call at station 3 at 6. After this formality he chatted for a few moments with several fellow officers and then left the station house to cover his route, part of which lay in the Hunnewell hill district.

Walking up the thoroughfare, he espied a rusty telephone wire dangling over the sidewalk opposite the house of Mr. Charles Batt, at 42 Washington st. Taking hold of the wire with the intention of pulling it aside, he received a shock which probably instantly proved fatal.

Saw Him Fall

Mr. Batt was in his house at the time but happened to see the patrolman fall.

He rushed towards Furdon, while a nurse who had been treating a member of Mr. Batt's family, rushed into the dwelling and procured restoratives.

Ex-Alderman Oliver M. Fisher was driving a short distance away on Washington street and saw the patrolman fall. He also rushed to his side, only to find that help was of no use to the man.

A resident of Washington st, whose name is not known, who probably also saw the man fall, notified police headquarters that a patrolman had fallen in the street. Lieut. William P. Soule sent Driver John T. Roche to the place with the ambulance. The three miles from police headquarters to Hunnewell hill was covered in about 12 minutes. It removed Furdon's body to his home in Newton Upper Falls.

An investigation was made by Sergt. Bernard F. Burke. It is thought that Furdon did not receive the shock until he broke off the rusty telephone wire. Although the wire was double charged from becoming crossed with an electric light wire in a place where the insulation had been worn off, it is believed that the rust kept the current from passing through Furdon's body until he broke off the wire so that the end came clear of the ground.

Help Came Quickly

Dr. Charles L. Pearson, whose home is a short distance away from the spot, was the first physician to arrive. City Physician Edward R. Utley arrived a few minutes later. Medical Examiner George L. West viewed the body. Furdon was a son of Thomas Furdon of 1304 Boylston street, Newton Upper Falls who is employed as a hostler at the highway stable at that place. Besides a father and a mother the patrolman is survived by three brothers and two sisters, of whom he was the oldest.

Last summer Furdon performed special duty during the vacation season. Previously to that he had been employed as a plumber. He made an efficient patrolman and was well liked. When it came time early this summer to secure special men to cover the routes of the regular patrolmen during this year's vacations, Chief of Police Mitchell again selected Furdon as one of the men best fitted for this work. He began his duties this year on June 18, being sent to division 3 for duty a few weeks ago.

Chief of Police Mitchell ordered flags on the police stations placed at half-staff Monday and Tuesday in memory of the patrolman. The men refrained from playing various games in the station houses, which had been their custom during spare time.

Many at the Funeral

The funeral of Patrolman Furdon took place Tuesday morning.

In the presence of many friends of the young man high mass of requiem was celebrated at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church, Newton Upper Falls, Rev. Fr. Timothy J. Danahy, the pastor, being celebrant.

There were many floral tributes, prominent among which was a magnificent badge sent by the members of the police department, with which Patrolman Furdon had been connected only a short time.

Chief of Police Frederic M. Mitchell, Lieut. William P. Soule, Sergt. Thomas C. Clay, Sergt. Bernard F. Burke and a delegation of about 40 patrolmen from the several divisions of the department attended the service. When the remains were removed to St. Mary's cemetery in Needham for burial, the police escorted the body as far as the bridge over the Charles river. Here they formed in a double column while the funeral procession passed between. The bearers were Patrolmen Joseph Dugan, John Shaughnessy, A. M. Fuller, John McKenzie, Henry Tibbets and James A. Mills.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre.—The principal entertainer of one of the strongest summer shows of the current season announced from Keith's for the week of Aug. 20, will be Murray Carson, the noted English actor-author-manager, who will perhaps be more readily identified hereabouts as the author of "Rosemary", in which play John Drew and Maude Adams were both starred. Mr. Carson will make his debut before Boston theatregoers in a one-act romantic play from his own pen, entitled, "The Point of the Sword", in which he will be supported by Miss Esme Berringer, a talented young actress, who likewise enjoys a unique reputation as an expert swordswoman. The surrounding show is a notable one, particularly so in point of the number of new entertainers on the program. Prominent on the list will be the four Melvins, quartet of marvelous acrobats; Hoey and Lee, popular Hebrew comedians and parody singers; the Ellis-Nowlin trio, mirth provoking comedy acrobats; Murray K. Hill, monologue and singing comedian; Young and DeVoe, in a terpsichorean novelty, "Dancing by Book"; Murphy and Andrews, comedians and parody singers; Cunningham and Smith, in the comedy sketch, "The Shoplifters", and the Hurleys, acrobats and equilibrists. The coming week will be the last but one of the present season's engagement of the Fadettes woman's orchestra, an announcement which will be regretted by the many musiclovers hereabouts. They will render the usual new program of selections, and an entire new list of comedy and interesting motion pictures will be exhibited in the kinetograph.

Grand Opera House.—"The Burglar's Daughter" which Vance and Sullivan Company will present at the Boston Grand Opera House as the attraction for next week, tells a story of modern New York life. The leading character of the play, "Meg of Mulberry Bend" is an ignorant and neglected little waif who is, at the death of her mother thrown out in the streets to shift for herself. The sensational features so dear to modern theatregoers have not been forgotten and at the end of the third act the race between a trolley car and a powerful automobile is a scenic and mechanical marvel. The production calls for seven large sets an aside from the race presents many novel features among which a beautiful moving panorama of New York harbor and a ship at sea during a heavy storm may be selected for mention. The company is especially selected for the various characters portrayed. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Tremont Theatre.—Next Monday night Harry Bulger enters into the last week of his stay at the Tremont Theatre as the star of the musical success of the year, "The Man From Now." Nothing Henry W. Savage has presented in Boston in years has met with the favor which has attended this production, and the Bangs, Bryan and Klein offering will long be remembered as one of the most attractive of his productions. A feature of the last week of Mr. Bulger's stay is the introduction into the cast of four new principals. Miss Sally Fisher, a prima donna of note who is well remembered here for her exceedingly artistic work and her beautiful voice during the run of "Sergeant Brue" now plays the role of Dora, and it fits her with a remarkable nicety. Gilbert Gregory, a former "Weberfields" star now has the role of Bensley, and his unique and original comedy methods show to good advantage as the detective. George Backus, a refined and experienced character actor portrays Professor Forcasta, while a former Boston favorite, Philip Branson, as the new Pennybacker. On the night of Monday, Aug. 20, the one hundredth performance of "The Man From Now", in Boston will be observed by the distribution of souvenirs.

Castle Square Theatre.—The successful season of opera at the Castle Square Theatre will be brought to a close next week by a series of notable performances. The operas to be sung have been selected from those which have proved the most popular during the summer, and the company is stronger than at any time since its organization. On Monday and Tuesday evenings "Pinafore" and "Cavalleria Rusticana", the double bill which showed that the theatre was far too small to accommodate the public that like good music, will be given, followed on Wednesday and Thursday evenings and at the Wednesday matinee by "Il Trovatore." The farewell week will end with a matinee on Saturday. At the end of the opera season next week the theatre will be closed for a few days for rehearsals by the dramatic stock company, whose season will begin on Saturday evening, September 1. The company will retain many old favorites.

Norumbega Park.

Visitors to Norumbega Park are manifesting considerable interest in the widely different manner in which two baby monkeys are being raised in the zoological garden. It was not intended as a zoological experiment at first but it has come to be looked upon in that respect not only by students of zoology but by all those who have the least interest in wild animal life. There are many other interesting animals in this wonderfully extensive collection at Norumbega Park and a visit extends over a greater period of time than one would at first believe possible if each animal is given his fair share of attention. The vaudeville programmes in the grand covered open air theatre at Norumbega Park have become so famous for the entertaining bills presented during this season that it is not unusual to find that every reserved seat has been bought or reserved over the telephone before the time for the performance.

WHITE MOUNTAINS

August the Banner Month in Premier Vacation Resort in America

August is the banner month among the mountains. During this month the resorters flock in large numbers to the uplands of New England. The gorgeous vistas of magnificent scenery, witnessed in the valleys and the highlands of the White Mountains, and the exhilarating and bracing mountain atmosphere so conducive to the health of the vacationist; the medicinal qualities in the air which produce a guaranteed cure for Hay Fever victims, all these things have created a fame for the White Mountains known throughout the world as America's most beautiful summer resort. Perhaps nowhere in the United States can one find such a combination of rare scenery and healthful atmosphere as among these hills. The Boston & Maine Passenger department publishes some beautifully illustrated literature concerning this region. The descriptive book "Among the Mountains" describes in detail this entire region; while the magnificent portfolio entitled "Mountains of New England" contains a series of delightful reproductions of photographs of this section. The descriptive booklet will be mailed to any address upon receipt of a two-cent stamp, and the portfolio upon receipt of six cents in stamps.

Literary Notes

Thousands of people who know George W. Cable only as the famous author will be introduced to him in Suburban Life for September in the role of expert gardener. Mr. Cable has been one of the leaders in the neighborhood garden club movement at Northampton, Mass. He has labored with boundless enthusiasm to spread the gospel of flowers and green lawns and beautiful homes. The results have been little short of amazing. One shining example is found in a particularly dingy and dreary factory street, where there are today no less than 30 well made and attractive garden plots, around the homes of workmen. Altogether this is one of the most interesting articles in one of the most interesting numbers Suburban Life has ever published.

Griggs. "So the critics treated your work very coldly."

MAIL NOW AT 10 P. M.

North Side Benefits by Innovation

The innovation of an outward mail late in the evening was given to the residents of the north side of the city for the first time Tuesday evening. The mail was despatched from the Newton post station shortly after 10 P. M., and will be continued each evening hereafter.

Collections will be made shortly before 10 o'clock from the principal letter boxes in Newton, Newtonville and West Newton. The mail matter will be brought to the Newton office, where it will be sorted and despatched in time to connect with the principal outgoing mails leaving the Boston postoffice around midnight.

The new mail will doubtless be a great convenience to the business men along the north side of the city as well as to the residents generally in that district. Arrangements have been in process of perfection by Postmaster Morgan of Newton Centre for several months. The acting establishment of the latest mail the Newtons have ever had was made possible only this week by the appointment of an extra clerk through the approval of the authorities at Washington and an increased allowance for expenses of the postoffice department in this city.

The present 8 P.M. outward mail from all over the city will be continued, as will also the collection from practically all boxes at midnight.

Congress has passed a bill for free alcohol!

Don't be alarmed. This statement, which you may have seen in the newspapers, does not imply free whisky; it simply means that the government has seen fit to remove the heavy internal revenue tax from non-drinkable alcohol intended for industrial purposes, thereby placing within the reach of the people a fuel material of incalculable value and utility. In the opinion of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chemist and chief of the National Bureau of Chemistry, "denaturized" alcohol, or alcohol rendered non-potable, is destined to be a great boon, not only to the manufacturer, but to the housewife as well.

That the law making free of taxation non-potable or denaturized alcohol for use in the arts has so largely escaped popular notice, although it is really one of the most important industrial measures of an extraordinary busy session, is probably largely due to a widespread misunderstanding of the significance of the phrase "in the arts." This does not mean merely the fine arts, such as painting, but all the industrial arts and handicrafts; in fact, embracing every possible use of alcohol except that of a beverage.

In a measure from the early days of the republic, and especially since 1862, alcohol has been subject to a heavy tax, both as a means of revenue and as a restriction upon the production and sale of intoxicating liquors. While this taxation has served the desired end it has at the same time unnecessarily prevented the extensive use of alcohol for altogether legitimate purposes—lighting, cooking and engine-driving—and has likewise greatly increased the cost of the many articles in the manufacture of which alcohol is largely employed.

Lessening the Cost of Production

Alcohol—meaning the fluid ninety-five per cent pure, technically known as "raw high-wines," is not, says Doctor Wiley, produced profitably at the present time for less than thirty-two cents a gallon, retail. When to this is added the internal revenue tax of $2.20, the fluid becomes somewhat too costly to be used in place of kerosene at fifteen or gasoline at twenty-five cents a gallon, although it is far superior to either for both heating and lighting.

Doctor Wiley does not anticipate the general manufacture of alcohol for less than twenty-five cents a gallon. Yet even at this price it would be of greater practical value than the mineral oils. Moreover, a recent investigator reports that from corn alone alcohol may be distilled at a total cost of but twelve cents a gallon, and from molasses at ten cents a gallon; and some sanguine calculators have estimated that the cost of production may be lowered to but four of five cents.

All this is not merely speculation, for, thanks to the enterprise of Emperor William, free denaturized alcohol is already an accomplished fact in the German Empire, where the fluid is produced at a very low cost from potatoes as well as other vegetables and fruits that have become unfit for food. But recently, Doctor Hansen, an expert from the Department of Agriculture, went to Europe for the purpose of securing for introduction into this country a variety of potato which, though too coarse to be desirable as an edible, is capable of yielding a large amount of alcohol. Naturally there are many wild speculations as to the possible reduction of cost, but the fact remains that alcohol may be extensively manufactured from what has hitherto been waste and useless materials.

The Alcohol Lamp

For lighting purposes alcohol is infinitely superior to kerosene and its products. First and foremost, it is non-explosive. Secondly, it is cleanly, burning with a smokeless and almost odorless flame. The flame is too pale to be used directly as an illuminant, but a French inventor has perfected a lamp in which alcohol, drawn by means of a wick into the burner, heats a mantle into incandescence, furnishing a most satisfactory light. Actual tests have shown that this lamp furnished with alcohol nearly doubled the illumination that it gave with kerosene.

Another experimenter, Professor Rousseau, of the University of Belgium, has concluded after a series of experiments that alcohol, even at thirty-one cents per gallon, is more economical than kerosene at fifteen cents per gallon, a given quantity of denaturized alcohol, ninety per cent pure, having furnished at least twice as much light and heat as an equal quantity of highly refined petroleum.

Alcoholic Cookery

At present alcohol is meagerly used for steaming the breakfast coffee, heating the chafing-dish for the evening Welsh rarebit, warming sad-irons or curling tongs. But these are just the beginnings of its possibilities for cooking and heating. Its non-explosiveness, cleanliness, lack of disagreeable odor, as well as the high degree of temperature it affords, will make it very valuable in culinary matters, particularly as a fuel for portable stoves and heaters. The advantages of the alcohol stove over the oil-stove are self-evident, and expense alone has prevented the free use of alcohol.

In the old French form of portable alcohol stove, the fuel is burned either on cotton in an open dish or by means of a little lamp. The lamp is rather inconvenient for heating an extended surface, and the open dish is somewhat dangerous, as careless or absent-minded cooks who have spilled burning alcohol, or blown it about in thoughtlessly trying to extinguish it, may have caused to remember. In a favorite American form of stove the burner consists of a cup filled with a packing of asbestos, upon which the alcohol is poured to saturation. Here, as there is no floating alcohol, there is absolutely no danger of scattering the flame, and the heating surface is considerably larger than that given by the wick of a lamp. Owing to its expense, little attention has been given to the development of the alcohol stove, but, as the heating value of alcohol is considerably greater than that of oil, and its other advantages are obvious, there is little question that the cheapening of the fluid will lead to great improvements.

Farm Machinery Operated by Alcohol

When it is remembered that the raw material for the production of alcohol is at hand on every farm, its possibilities as a fuel for stationary engines for household purposes, as well as for farm labor and transportation, become particularly apparent. Today, the alcohol engine is practically unknown in this country, but in Germany, in 1905, more than a thousand engines were built to be operated by denaturized alcohol alone. These included motors for carriages, wagons, boats, farm machinery, pumps, electric-light plants and mills. They were of the type known as the internal combustion engine, already so extensively used in this country with gasoline as a fuel.

The sole advantage of gasoline has been its comparative cheapness. As the cost of denaturized alcohol steadily decreases it seems that the alcohol engine must inevitably supersede the gasoline engine. Aside from its superior advantages as a non-explosive fuel, alcohol produces twenty per cent more power than the coal-oil product, and does not contaminate the air. The alcohol motor-car will be odorless.

More and more, machinery is lightening farm labor, and the use of alcohol, distilled from the farmer's own products, is destined still further to aid him in his work. A little stationary engine of two horse-power is sufficient to grind the feed, saw the wood, pump the water, churn the butter, work the cream separator and run the mill. Before long the alcohol engine, even on the smaller farms, may accomplish the more arduous labors of plowing, harrowing, harvesting and thrashing much more economically than horse power.

Alcohol in Legitimate Irrigation

Cost of fuel to operate pumping machinery has in many sections of the West been the principal obstacle to the reclamation of arid land through irrigation. Where irrigation sites are distant from petroleum wells, coal deposits and forests, as well as railroads, the cost of fuel for pumping engines is prohibitive. The sugar-beet, one of the staple crops of irrigated land, yields an abundance of alcohol, so it will be only necessary to raise a sufficient crop of this useful vegetable to obtain a supply of power for the pumping machinery that will indefinitely increase the irrigated area.

The Regulation of Distilling Plants

Of course it is hardly practicable that the government should permit every farmer who grows alcohol-producing vegetables to manufacture the spirit in his wood-shed. The temptation to employ the product for other than useful purposes would be too great, and we must wait for the millennium before every still constructed for the manufacture of moonshine whisky is devoted to the production of alcohol for less baneful purposes. It is highly important that the government shall not in any way relax the strictness of its supervision of the manufacture of spirits. All distilling will probably be conducted in licensed establishments under the eye of a revenue officer. There may be arrangements for what might be termed neighborhood distilleries, to which farmers might bring their beets, potatoes, yams, and other suitable vegetables to be distilled into alcoholic fuel, exactly as they would carry their grain to a cooperative mill; and there may be special arrangements for farmers in remote districts. But the regular method of procedure will probably be that the alcohol, when manufactured, shall be sent to a bonded warehouse where the denaturizing process shall be performed, and, having thus been rendered non-potable, it may be withdrawn without payment of revenue tax.

The Cheapening of Transportation and Manufactures

It is hardly necessary to expatiate on the advantages that the cheapening of alcohol will bring about in the transportation of motor-carriages and boats. It will open a new field for invention, and the next few years will undoubtedly witness the introduction of innumerable mechanisms and contrivances that will further exploit the possibilities of alcohol.

Alcohol plays an important part in the manufacture of wide range of articles and materials of everyday use, the cost of which should now be greatly cheapened. In the making of hats, half a gallon of alcohol is needed to every half dozen. Alcohol is used in great quantities in the manufacture of shellac and fine varnishes, and its cheapening may materially affect the prices of the many articles, such as furniture, pianos, picture-mouldings, passenger cars, lead-pencils, brushes, toys and whips. A few other commodities in the manufacture of which alcohol is extensively employed are aniline colors and dyes, transparent soap, metal hardware, incandescent mantles, celluloid, many organic chemicals, and fulminates and smokeless powders.

Room for a New Fuel

It should not be imagined that alcohol will altogether displace coal-oil and its products. But petroleum, being a mineral deposit, is exhaustible, even if remotely exhaustible, and its use in great quantities as a fuel for railroad locomotives and motor vehicles is increasing to such an enormous extent as to make the availability of other fuels a most important consideration. Alcohol, to say nothing of its other advantages, being a vegetable product, is practically inexhaustible. Increased demand will lead to a constant cheapening of methods of production, as its cheapening has led to an increased demand for alcohol itself. Moreover, as a universal vegetable product, manufactured under government supervision, it is unlikely that its price can be successfully manipulated or permanently controlled by industrial combination in this country.—Woman's Home Companion for Sept.

Fall Millinery

Mlle. Caroline, just returned from Paris, writes: the petit chapeau, for the coming season, is to be the very top notch of fashion; it exceeds the wildest anticipation and its coming has created a furore. The shapes, generally long and narrow, are tilted high on the "congregation side." Greys and drabs of wine shades though much in evidence, are out done by the popular plaids. Fancy feathers comprised of marabout and culture quills make effective trimming for the smart hats, while ostrich tips are quite correct for the dressy effects. BASEBALL

Y. M. C. A. Trimmed Medford 19 to 0 on Cabot Park Diamond

The Newton Y. M. C. A. team had no difficulty in showing its supremacy over Medford Saturday afternoon, when in a game played on the Cabot Park diamond the local team whitewashed the visitors to the tune of 19 to 0. The game attracted many spectators.

The feature was the pitching of Nelson, who struck out 12 men. Newton made 18 hits and three errors, while Medford made only three hits but five errors. Nelson and Wharton were the battery for the home team and Thulan, Leavitt and Perry for the Medfords.

POLITICAL NOTES

Seward W. Jones of Newton, in spite of the trick which was played on him in his councillor district by the redistricting committee, is going to get there. He is one of the type of men who deserve recognition. Men who bring votes into the party and up to the polls are too scarce nowadays to be treated in any off-hand fashion. It looks now as if the way was fair and clear. Chester Clark is hovering around the edges with the idea in his mind that he would like to be a candidate. If he goes in, Chester Williams of Wayland and Herbert Fletcher of Westford will also enter, but it is to be hoped that Mr. Clark will learn that the dinner bell does not ring all the time, even in political life. The old rule to rise from the table while still feeling hungry is one which should be brought to his attention.—Practical Politics.

The Seventh Annual Reunion of the Chase-Chace Family Association will be held at Hotel Vendome, Boston, at 10.30 A. M., Thursday, September 6, 1906. Ex-Gov. Bates and representatives of several of the leading family associations of New England are to be guests of the Chase's on this occasion. An invitation to attend the gathering is extended to all Chase-Chace name or descent.

In another column we print a summary of the recent census figures which have given Newton the notoriety of standing highest in the country in its per capita debt. We desire to call attention to the equally high rank in the per capita valuation, and to the figures we print regarding the percentage of debt to valuation. We believe this fact to be more indicative of the soundness of municipal life than the per capita debt, as the amount of debt is not so important as its relation to the collateral behind
the debt and the ability to cancel the obligation when due. Many of our wealthy business men owe an amount of money, daily, which would crush
those of less financial worth, and the careful lender lays more stress on the collateral than on the loan.

We also believe that Newton citizens have received and are today receiving the full value for the sums, included in our city debt.

The census places these at the gross
sum of $6,450,800, of which $2,183,000
is for water, $1,781,000 for sewer, $887-300 for school buildings, $126,900 for other municipal buildings, about $50,000
for parks and $1,781,100 for highway improvements. Over a million of this last item was caused by the Washington street widening and abolition of the north side grade crossings, and over a half million, was expended for Commonwealth avenue. The latter expenditure was one of the best investments
the city ever made, the annual receipts from increased taxes largely exceeding the interest and sinking fund requirements.

The facts are that the widely scattered nature of our city requires more miles
of water main, sewers and streets, and more school buildings, than other cities of equal area, or population, and Newton citizens should continually bear
these things in mind when comparing municipal statistics with other cities.

The Malden water commissioners
have abolished the meter rental of $2.
hitherto paid in that city and reduced its minimum rate from $12. to $9. per annum. Brookline reduced its water rates considerably early in the spring,
and yet with receipts in excess of expenditures. Mayor Warren fails to abolish the needless tax of $1.50 for water meters in this city and the aldermen appear to be equally negligent in the matter of reduction on the price paid for water. 1907 will see the water department with a large balance on the right side of the ledger, and a portion of which should be given back to the public in the shape of cheaper water.

Insurance Commissioner Cutting's report contains some interesting reading and some strong recommendations for legislation. Possibly Mr. Cutting's environment at Newton Centre has something to do with the soundness of his suggestions.

We hear that Col. Benton of Belmont is protesting the act of the County Commissioners in allotting Newton three representatives while Belmont and Watertown have only one. The Colonel might find better ground for criticism than the Newton allotment.

MORE WIRES DOWN

Three Heavily Charged Fell Sunday

Luckily no One was Passing at the Time

Several live wires which were heavily charged fell in different sections of the city Sunday night and greatly alarmed the residents. Fortunately there were no pedestrians on the streets at the time the wires fell and no one was injured.

One electric wire, which was said to have been charged with 2000 volts of electricity, became crossed with another carrying 500 volts and fell at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets, Newton Centre.

For some little time there was a display of "fireworks" which would have done credit to a Crystal Lake exhibition on the Fourth of July. The display caused no little alarm to the residents of the vicinity. As quickly as possible line men reached the place and got the wires into position again. In the meantime several policemen under the direction of Sergt. Thomas C. Clay kept many curious spectators who had been attracted to the place from wandering
too near the sputtering wires.

A little later in the evening another heavily charged wire fell on Winchester street, Newton Highlands. Much the same scenes were enacted here. This wire had just been repaired when another one, also heavily charged, fell on Oxford road. Linemen went quickly to the place and repaired the wire before it did any damage of much consequence.

During the evening four other wires were found burning trees in various sections of the city. This was caused by the insulation being rubbed off by the wires coming in constant contact with the bark of the trees.

By many residents it was considered a peculiar incident that several heavily charged wires should fall during the same evening, for it was but just a week ago that night that Patrolman William H. Furdon was killed while trying to remove a live wire on Hunnewell hill which he thought was endangering the safety of pedestrians.

There has previously been but little trouble caused by falling wires in this city for many months. Not for a long time had any heavily charged wires fallen before these two nights.

It was fortunate that no one happened
to be passing on the several thoroughfares Sunday evening when the several charged wires fell. It was also due to the extreme precautions taken that several persons were kept from wandering dangerously near the wires when they were lying in the streets.

FORESTERS' PICNIC

Members of Springfield Court at Cabot Park

One hundred members of McDermott Court 186, M. C. O. F., of Springfield came to Newton Wednesday afternoon
as guests of Middlesex Court 60 of this city.

The visitors were escorted to Cabot
park, where a varied and enjoyable program was given. There was a general social time, during which refreshments were served. There were minor sports for the Foresters who were inclined to compete against each other.

The feature of the afternoon was a baseball game played between teams representing the Middlesex and Mc-Dermott courts. The honors went to the visiting Foresters, the Springfield nine winning by a score of 10 to 6.

Collins, Walsh, Farrington and Galvin were the battery for the Springfield players, while Middlesex court had a battery comprising Barry, Kilheala and Keno. The visitors made 12 hits and four errors, while the home team made seven hits and five errors.

The Springfield delegation was in charge of Major J. L. Leonard, high secretary-treasurer, and F. J. Collins, high chief ranger. The arrangements for the picnic were in charge of P. S.
Cunniff, high chief ranger of Middlesex court, and James A. Desmond, deputy ranger.

STABBED IN LUNG

Boghus First Hit His Companion

Someone Had Talked About His Honor—Assessed $25

By the arraignment in the police court of three Newton Upper Falls Armenians the particulars of a stabbing affray which occurred Friday night were revealed Tuesday. The men were held,
however, only upon a charge of creating a disturbance.

After a lengthy trial which occupied nearly all the morning session and a part of the afternoon, one man was found guilty and fined $25 and the two others were discharged.

The men were Boghus Kizarian, 23 years old, of 58 Mechanic street, and Mugerditch Hagopian, 21 and Vataris
Atamian, 39, both of whom live at 60
Mechanic street.

Testimony brought out the fact that Friday night Boghus went to the boarding house at 58 Mechanic street to see a man who had talked about his honor.
The man was not at home, but Boghus
found Mugerditch sitting on the stairs writing a letter. Provoked over not having located his enemy Boghus hit Mugerditch over the shoulder with a loaded shot gun, it was alleged, breaking the stock. Hagopian, it was asserted, then stabbed Boghus through the lung with a knife. Both men were in a serious condition when they appeared in the court.

J. W. Murphy, a neighbor, testified to seeing part of the fight. He saw Boghus hit someone a clip with the stock
of the gun, but could not tell who it was.

During the course of the trial Judge
Kennedy took occasion to reprimand
one of the interpreters, who, it was asserted by another interpreter, had wrongly translated the testimony of one of the defendants. Judge Kennedy told the man not to try to act as assistant counsel for the defendant, but to translate the testimony impartially and fully.

Lawyer Charles Stark appeared for Mugerditch and Vataris and Thomas F.
Valley for Boghus.

THREW STONES AT TRAIN

Newton Centre Lad Hit a Needham Man Who Was Riding

John de Courcey, an 11-year old Newton Centre boy, was called before Judge Kennedy of the police court without arraignment Wednesday morning and given a severe reprimand for throwing stones at the railroad trains at Newton Highlands. The boy admitted having thrown a stone from near the Walnut street bridge August 4, which went through a window of a car and hit a man named Barnes living in Needham.
The train was a section of a New Haven train which was being pushed down
from Cook street to the Boston & Albany railroad tracks at Newton Highlands.

A Wild Ride

A wild ride through Waltham street,
West Newton, late Wednesday night,
caused the arraignment of James A.
Seagrave Jr., living at 74 Lincoln road,
Brighton, in court yesterday morning
on a charge of reckless driving and drunkenness. On the charge of drunk-ness he was fined $10, and for reckless driving a fine of $20 was imposed.

Patrolmen Daniel McLaughlin and James D. Ryan, both of whom are on their vacations, were standing on Waltham street near Fuller terrace when they heard a carryall coming down the street at a rapid pace. As the vehicle swung past Fuller terrace it tipped over.
The occupants hustled out and righted
the vehicle and were away again toward Waltham before the patrolmen could catch up to them. A woman had fallen from the vehicle when it overturned and she was left lying by the roadside.

The patrolmen were making preparations to have the unknown woman cared for when they heard the vehicle coming back at a fast clip. It swung into sight in a few moments, the horse covered with lather and the vehicle swaying from right to left.

The occupants paid no attention to the shouts of the patrolmen to stop, and they then tried to stop the rapidly moving carriage. Patrolman Ryan was thrown and sustained numerous minor bruises while parts of his clothes were torn almost to shreds.

Patrolman McLaughlin managed to hold onto and finally stop the vehicle,
although one of the occupants hit him
several clips with a whip.

When Seagrave was arraigned in court he cried when called to the witness stand. He asserted that he would have stopped when first warned had he known the two men were policemen. As they were in civilians' clothes, said he,
he could not tell that they were policemen.

The two patrolmen told of having found empty beer bottles in the carriage. Fines of $10 on the drunkenness charge and $20 for reckless driving were then imposed.

SLEPT ON HIS HURDY-GURDY

Boccaroso Slumbered too Long and Came to Grief

Celestino Boccaroso, a hurdy-gurdy man living in this city who was early in the summer arraigned in the police court for grinding out music before 9
A. M. in violation of a city ordinance, went to sleep on his hurdy-gurdy Wednesday night and got into more trouble.

Celestino was found sound asleep on top of his hurdy-gurdy in Newton Centre by patrolman James A. Mills. The horse attached to the outfit was wandering about lawns and fields nibbling the grass here and there.

The Italian was arraigned in court for violating a city ordinance. The police alleged that he frequently goes to sleep evenings on top of the hurdy-gurdy and allows his horse to shift for himself, making an evening meal from the grass on lawns and in fields. This practice, it is stated, has caused no end of annoyance to residents of Newton Centre.

A fine of $3 was imposed. Celestino said he would stay awake until he reached home hereafter and would buy the animal's "feed" after this.

CITY OF NEWTON

PRESIDENT'S OFFICE,
June 27, 1906.

To the Board of Aldermen of the City of Newton.

The Board of Directors of the Newton Street Railway Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the Commonwealth and operating a street railway in the City of Newton, respectfully represents that public convenience
and necessity require a re-location of its tracks upon Washington Street in said City of Newton, at Nonantum Square.

WHEREFORE your petitioner respectfully petitions for the right to relocate its tracks as shown on plan filed herewith (No. 10758) dated June 20th, 1906.

And your petitioner further requests
the privilege to make such underground,
surface and overhead alterations as may be necessary to properly construct said tracks.

Your petitioner also requests permission to erect such necessary poles and overhead wires as may be necessary for the operation of its railway upon said location by the Overhead Single Trolley System.

Respectfully submitted,

The Board of Directors
of the Newton Street Railway Company.

By ADAMS D. CLAFIN, President.

IN BOARD OF ALDERMEN, July 16, 1906.
Upon the foregoing petition it is ordered by the Board of Aldermen of the City of Newton that a hearing be had thereon on Monday, the 10th day of September, 1906, at 10 o'clock p. m., before said Board in the City Hall, in that part of said Newton called

REV. DR. BURR RESIGNS

Was Pastor Newton Centre Baptist Church Six Years

The resignation of Rev. Dr. Everett
D. Burr, for six years pastor of the First Baptist church, Newton Centre, was received at a meeting of the parish held Tuesday evening.

The resignation came as a surprise to a large number of the members of the parish, for it was known to but a few of the most intimate friends of Rev. Dr.
Burr that he had any intention of leaving his parish in this city.

When Rev. Dr. Burr came to the Newton Centre church six years ago he promised that he would remain in the community for five years. During that time he has accomplished much valuable work and has built up the society in a pleasing manner.

During the last few weeks Rev. Dr.
Burr has been sojourning at Peterboro,
N. H. He will not return to Newton Centre to again occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church, it is stated, and in view of this decision a substitute cler-gyman has been secured for the first few Sundays of September. He has accepted a pastorate in Buffalo.

With his family Rev. Dr. Burr has made his home at 848 Beacon street, Newton Centre.

CARRIAGES COLLIDED

Jerome Tenian Injured, but Newtonville Couple Escaped

A carriage owned and occupied by T. F. Melody, an Auburndale stable man, and a light runabout occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Marcellus W. Chase of Austin street, Newtonville, were in collision Wednesday night at the corner of Waltham and Crafts streets, West Newton. Several of the occupants of the vehicles were injured.

Mr. Melody was driving Jerome Tenian, of Fuller terrace and John Murphy of Waltham street to their homes. Mr. and Mrs. Chase were returning from a pleasure trip. The vehicles met head on at the sharp corner of the two thoroughfares.

One of the shafts broke off and struck Tenian in the small of the back, inflicting a severe wound. He was removed to his home, where he is still in a serious condition. It is believed that he will have to undergo a surgical operation. Melody, Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. Chase were all badly shaken up and considerably bruised. The carriages were badly smashed.

Fortunately the wheels interlocked in such a manner that the horses were unable to pull the carriages apart. This doubtless kept them from running away and causing even worse injuries to the occupants of the vehicles.

The accident occurred at almost the same spot where last November Dr. Patrick F. Condy, a well-known West Newton physician, was severely injured while riding in a light carriage by being struck by an automobile owned and occupied by Harold D. Church of Valentine street, West Newton.

Literary Notes

The Story of Montana, the great serial for the year, begun in the August McClure's, gains impetus as it goes along. From its striking picture of the early days of the commonwealth, it turns to the development of the mining industry, the picturesque conditions and enormous fortunes which resulted, and the bitter feud that arose between Marcus Daly and William A. Clark. The story of the quarrel, of Clark's first attempts to reach the United States Senate, of his spectacular defeat, and of the Montana capital fight, is told in the September McClure's. It makes one of the most interesting pages in American history.

A Royal Romance, by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, is a timely narrative of the young King of Spain's courtship of an English girl. One of the remarkable features of the article is the account of a personal interview with Princess Ena. The thirty-year war between the New York Mutual and Equitable companies is related with some surprising disclosures in chapter V. of Burton J. Hendrick's The Story of Life-Insurance. Eugene Wood contributes an original article on Niagara.

The fiction department of the September McClure's lives up to the record made in the August number. Kipling, in the fifth of his Robin Goodfellow stories, tells the charming legend of how the fairies were ferried out of England. Percival Gibbon appears for the first time in McClure's with a remarkable South African tale, The Trader of Last Notch. B. Jones, Butcher, is a satire by Samuel Hopkins Adams, in which one man, single-handed, fights a trust. John McIntyre tells an amusing tale of boy life in a Catholic school, under the title of The Three Wise Men, and James Hopper contributes a comedy of Filipino life, Benevolent Assimilation. There is a realistic narrative of a Western political campaign, by Viola Roseboro, and a poem by Florence Wilkinson, The Mountain God.

The front-piece of the September number, from a painting by C. N. Wyeth, represents The Prospector, a significant figure in Western history. W. Hatherell has drawn the pictures for James Hopper's story, Andre Castaigne and Frederic Dorr Steele illustrate Kipling's fairy tale, and L. Raven Hill has fine artistic drawings for The Three Wise Men. Eugene Wood's article on Niagara is accompanied by some remarkable color reproductions.

REAL ESTATE

Numerous Transfers are Reported

Hot Wave Seems to Put No Blanket on Business

The hot weather of the past week has apparently put no blanket on the real estate business throughout the Newtons. Numerous transfers of property were reported this week. The real estate men say they are unusually busy this summer and most of them report a substantial increase in business over the corresponding period of the last few years.

The dwelling house and 6500 feet of land numbered 66 Prospect street, West Newton, has been transferred by Mrs. Emily J. Tainter to Mrs. Marie W. Stevens.

John Moir has taken title to two parcels on Hammond street and Lee avenue, Chestnut Hill, the grantor being Ralph H. White. In the first instance a large house and 34,673 feet of land have a taxable valuation of $29,300, with $9,300 on the land, while on Lee avenue, 7500 feet of land has a valuation of $1200.

Mary Shuker is the new owner of the property numbered 7 Shawmut Park, Newton Upper Falls, the grantor being Calvin C. Brackett. A frame house and 2853 feet of land have a taxable valuation of $1800, $200 being the value of the land.

Henry H. Read has leased for the Newton Savings Bank house situated No. 55 Ballard street, Newton Centre, to Mr. F. F. Ingraham who moves here from Brookline.

Charles E. A. Beck has conveyed to George F. Richardson the property numbered 39 Grove street, Newton Lower Falls, where a frame house and 15,221 feet of land have a taxable valuation of $2200. The land is appraised at $700 of the total.

Marketmen Beat Tip Tops

In a game played yesterday afternoon on the Cabot park diamond, the Newton marketmen handily defeated the Tip Top team of Cambridge to the tune of 8 to 1. The game was watched by a large number of spectators from this city and Cambridge.

Wilmor and Daley were the battery for the local team, and they easily out-classed Brown and Murray, the battery for the university city ball tossers. The marketmen got six hits and made but one error. The Cambridge players were able to get but three hits and made four errors. H. Wilson and Foster did the umpiring.

Off to Y. M. C. A. Meet

Messrs Carlton Ellison, Secretary H. W. Bascom, William Wharton and W. Day, all well known members of the Newton Y. M. C. A., left this morning for Lake George, N. Y., as delegates from the local association to the convention which will be held next week at that resort. They will be gone about a week.

Mrs. Mary Duane

Mrs. Mary Duane, widow of Martin Duane, died Wednesday at the age of 75 years, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Smith of Bowen street, Newton Centre. Mrs. Duane was born in Ireland. She came to this city many years ago and was well known to many of the residents of Newton Centre.

Following services held at the home of her daughter this morning high mass of requiem was celebrated at the Church of the Sacred Heart at 9 o'clock, Rev. Fr. Dennis J. Wholey, the pastor, being celebrant. The burial was in Mt. Benedict cemetery, West Roxbury.

Two Overcome by Heat

Mr. John McCarthy, a 60-year old resident of Newton, was overcome by heat while walking on Washington street, Boston, Thursday afternoon, and was removed to the Relief hospital in that city. He was reported as having practically recovered this morning.

It was reported in Newton Upper Falls yesterday that John Mitchell, 16-years old, living on High street, was overcome by the heat while on that thoroughfare. He was taken to his home, where he received medical attendance.

Took Pie and Cigars

Thieves entered Ryan's store at Auburndale avenue and River street, West Newton, last night. After making a feast of pie they carried away several boxes of cigars. Entrance was gained by forcing a window.

FRESH AIR CAMP

mother could continue work to pay rent and buy the necessities of life. The girl was in broken health when she came to the camp, but to 10 days' living in wholesome surroundings practically restored her health.

One woman who had bought furniture on an installment plan and had eventually lost everything in her home was another recent inmate. With her four pretty little fatherless boys she spent 10 days in the camp. The Salvation Army put furniture into her house when she returned home. This woman several days ago came out to the camp to personally thank the captain for this kindness, which enabled her to again work for a living for her family of little ones.

A woman whose husband had deserted her, leaving three babies ranging in ages from three years to four months, was another inmate. She had worked when able. Luckily she had been properly cared for by a charitable institution through her confinement. When she came to the camp she was not even strong enough to nurse her youngest baby. In a few weeks she was well enough to return to work.

This woman was offered a place in a well-to-do family if she would place her children in a home. "I will never give them up until God takes them from me," she asserted.

Through caring in this manner at the West Newton camp for mothers and children home surroundings have been bettered in numerous instances. One little girl sent home a post card a few days after arriving in the camp, with this message: "I have a good bed and plenty to eat now."

Large families are possessed by many of the mothers obliged to support themselves. Last week there were three mothers of the half dozen in the camp who had five children each. Another mother who had been afflicted with much sickness had four children.

When a GRAPHIC reporter visited the camp several days ago Mrs. Capt. Abraham paid a warm tribute to the many guests she has had under her charge this summer. "There was but a single case that we were not satisfied was deserving," said she. "Every one of the several hundred others was anxious to help with the work of the camp, although we assure them that they need not do so unless they so desire themselves."

One of our subscribers took us to task this week for failing, says an exchange, to publish all that happened. It was fortunate for this particular individual that discretion occasionally demands the omission of unpleasant news. Should we publish all that is told to us we would be with the angels in about twenty minutes after our papers were mailed. We try to print all items that are news, or that will encourage, help or cheer any of our citizens along life's rugged road. We all doubtless would enjoy reading "all the news" when it's about the other fellow, but our policy is to turn over to the gossips the spreading of scandals that only leave sorrow in their trail.

The public should not overlook the fact, says an exchange, that when conductors of street railroads are stealing fares they are robbing not only the company and its stockholders, but the passengers. The measure of service which can be rendered on any road depends upon the receipts. If a company's income is large, it can afford to be liberal in giving transfers, it can extend the distance over which it carries a person for a single fare, it can run cars at hours of the day when the actual traffic does not justify this being done. Receipts which are dishonestly diverted from the company to the pockets of its employees hamper by just so much the service which can be furnished. It is, therefore, in the interest of every passenger that all fares collected be turned into the treasury of the company and not stolen by dishonest employees.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre.—The week commencing Monday, August 27th will be "Farewell Week" for the Fadettes at Keith's Theatre, Boston, for the present year. Mrs. Nichols' incomparable organization will, on Saturday, September 1st, complete their fifth consecutive summer season as the leading feature of America's most famous vaudeville house. For thirteen weeks, they have furnished visitors to Boston with a never failing source of pleasure, and their programmes have provided enjoyment of the most satisfying sort to many thousands of tourists. For the final week, a "Request Programme" is to be played, the selections being made from the compositions that have received the warmest endorsements from patrons of the house, the endorsements being in the form of letters received from Monday the 20th up to and including Wednesday the 22nd. The full programme will be announced in next Sunday's Boston papers.

The vaudeville section of the bill will include an act that has been imported for the Keith Circuit—Claire Beasy's troupe of performing cats, the best trained band of felines yet exhibited. They come direct to Boston from Liverpool, where they closed a long engagement on the Moss and Thornton tour on the 11th of this month.

Other features of the bill will be the Doherty Sisters, two clever comedienne; Carson and Willard, a pair of amusing German comedians, and the Melotte-La Nole Trio, acrobatic humorists.

The opening of the regular fall and winter season will occur on Monday, September 3rd, Labor Day, with Cressy and Dayne and Berzac's Circus as the leading features.

Castle Square Theatre.—Next Saturday evening the regular dramatic season at the Castle Square Theatre begins. The stock company, headed by Howell Hansel as leading man and Miss Theis Lawton as leading woman, will appear as heretofore in a weekly change of bill that will include many of the most popular plays of the day, and no pains will be spared in making every production and revival as perfect and as artistic as possible.

Among the new members of the company, in addition to Miss Lawton, will be Ben Johnson, Shelly Hull, Louise Albion, Frederick Murray and Frances Brandt, the favorite players remaining from last season being Mr. Hansel, Lenora Bradley, Mark Kent, John Waldron, Edward Wade and Elfrida Lasche.

The opening play, beginning next Saturday evening and continuing through the following week, will be "Mistress Nell," the sparkling comedy made famous by Henrietta Crossman several seasons ago.

Colonial Theatre.—Wright Lorimer will begin his fourth Boston engagement in "The Shepherd King" at the Colonial Theatre on Monday, Sept. 3rd, opening with a special Labor Day matinee. Mr. Lorimer's engagement will last for three weeks and an entirely new and if possible, more gorgeous production than ever before, of "The Shepherd King" will be given. This talented actor, has, by his remarkable performances of David, done much to advance the stage. His performance is most appealing and it is so well known in Boston and New England that it requires little mention. Mr. Lorimer's company will number upwards of 150 people and during this engagement the orchestra at the Colonial Theatre will be augmented to 24 musicians. Mr. Eckstrom will again be seen as Prince Jonathan, Mr. Hales as King Saul, Mr. Price as Ahimelech, Miss Ward as Adora, and Miss Margaret Hayward as the Witch of Endor. A new Princess Michal in the person of Miss Marie Shotwell will be seen. She is a leading actress well and favorably known in this vicinity. Miss Lorena Atwood will be the Princess Merab.

Grand Opera House.—Of all last season's big successes, "Custer's Last Fight" took the lead. The company played every city of importance in the United States and Canada, and the result was always the same—standing room only. The organization comes to the Boston Grand Opera House next week with practically the original strong cast and immense production. The company carries forty people, which, with its band of full-blooded Indians, makes it the largest dramatic company on the road. The cowboys, scouts, horses and all the paraphernalia used in the great battle scene have been secured through the courtesy of Col. Gordon W. Lillie (Pawnee Bill). Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

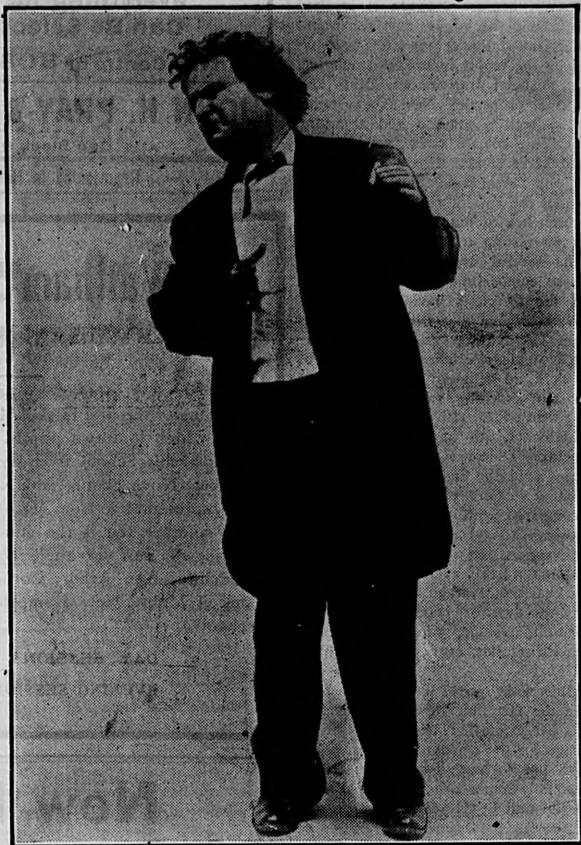

Norumbega Park.—The beautiful Charles River with its boating and canoeing has always been one of the attractive features of a visit to Norumbega Park. Ever since the park opened over ten years ago the management has striven with excellent effect to make their canoe livery the best on the river. Each year there are additions both to the boat house and to the number of boats and canoes until now it is conceded that there is no better equipped boathouse on the entire river.

But there are other features in the park quite as attractive as the boating. There is the zoological garden that is famous for its varied collection of animals as well as for the number. The Mysterious Chalet is a most popular amusement place for in addition to the many electrical wonders, there is the Japanese Village with all the wares of these clever people spread out in tempting array with their Oriental costumes making a bright touch of color. There are the swing court and the merry ground, and the ever popular grand covered open air theatre with its excellent vaudeville programmes and the merry musical comedies which are presented every afternoon and evening during the entire season no matter what the weather.

The Suburbanite. "I made arrangements with two cooks yesterday." His Wife (astonished). "Two cooks!" "Yes. One is to come tomorrow, and the other in two weeks."—London Telegraph.

Mrs. Whyte. "Did you enjoy seeing Bernhardt?" Mrs. Wylkyns. "Oh, yes. But one thing seemed queer. Are you sure she is a real Frenchwoman? Her pronunciation isn't a bit like Mary's."—Somerby Journal.

Gallic gallantry could no further go than the compliment Sarah Bernhardt, safe in Paris, recalls of the Western dry goods clerk who said to her, "Madame, I learned French only to hear you, and it was worth it."—New York World.

WORK ON EXHIBITION

That of Nonantum Vacation School Viewed by Many

A large number of interested parents and friends of the many pupils of the Nonantum vacation school gathered at the Jackson schoolhouse Friday afternoon, when for two hours the annual exhibition of the work of the busy little folk was shown to advantage.

The exhibition brought out warm praise from the many spectators. Much of the work of the girls was devoted to cooking, sewing and basketry, while a majority of the boys took to woodworking and turned out some very creditable pieces of work. The visitors were conducted through the rooms by the teachers who have been employed during the last six weeks in the various courses.

The subjects taught this season were as follows: Woodwork, taught by Mr. James E. Owens; basketry, taught by Miss Cora E. Bigelow and Mr. M. Hollander; sewing, taught by Miss Grace Gillette and Mrs. S. L. Blue; cooking, taught by Miss Edith Hamilton and Miss Edith Emery.

For the smaller pupils there was a primary class which was taught by Miss Helen V. Mason and Miss Amelia Gunther. The kindergarten classes were taught by Miss M. Louise Randall and Miss Nellie E. Terrell, while the instruction in games was by Miss Mary V. McGrath. Miss Lillian A. Young was the general supervisor of all the studies.

EGGS TOOK A DROP

Just About Five Dozen Went to Smash in West Newton

Two West Newton boys, aged 4 and 9 years old, went into a store on Washington street, that village, Sunday, and enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. The lads found the bulkhead unlocked and went into the cellar.

Setting a barrel head on a pile of boxes they amused themselves by throwing five dozen eggs, one at a time, at the target.

The owner did not think it funny when he discovered the havoc made by the strong arm practice when he opened up for business the following morning.

It is stated that the offenders are so small that nothing but a severe reprimand could be inflicted as punishment.

CUT HIS OWN THROAT

West Newton Motorman Will Live

Hot Weather and Illness Said to Have Been Cause

James W. O'Grady, for many years a motorman on the Newton street railway system, attempted suicide Tuesday morning at the car barn on upper Main street, Waltham, by cutting his throat with a pocket knife.

He was hurried to the Waltham hospital, where the quick work of the doctors and nurses probably saved his life. He will probably recover, for he used a knife which was too dull to make a complete job of it.

It is believed that illness and suffering from the extremely hot weather caused him to attempt to take his own life. The street railway officials were unable to assign any other reason for the rash act.

O'Grady, who is well known about the north side of this city, having been employed on the electric here for more than a dozen years, arrived at the Waltham car barn shortly after 6 o'clock. He was to have taken out one of the early morning cars. He was seen going into one of the small barns adjoining the larger one, and a moment later was noticed hacking away at his throat.

Other employees rushed into the place and after a severe struggle managed to get the knife away from the would-be suicide.

Word was sent to the police station, and the injured man was taken to the hospital in the ambulance.

He succeeded in inflicting a bad gash in his throat, partially severing the windpipe.

O'Grady has been in the employ of the company a great many years, and his employers speak of him as a faithful employee.

Walker. "I see Edison claims he can make an auto that will go fast enough to take a man's breath away."

Scortcher. "That's nothing; I've taken a couple of men's breath away with this one."

—She. "Do you believe in the faith cure?"

He. "Yes, for one thing."

She. "And what is that?"

He. "For jealousy."

Progressive Piano Firm

The above cut shows the street front of the warerooms of Geo. L. Schirmer & Co., one of the youngest but most progressive firms who handle pianos in Boston. Although they have been in business but a few years, they are old in experience, being practical piano men who have graduated step by step from the work-bench to the position which they now occupy. Their responsibility is shown by the fact that they are the exclusive representatives in Eastern Massachusetts, for two of the largest manufacturers of the better grades of pianos in Boston, i. e., The Everett Piano Co., and The Emerson Piano Co., which in addition to other makes gives them so varied an assortment that they can meet the wishes of any intending purchaser of a piano both as to quality and price. Their business instinct led them to choose a location out of the established "piano row" where high rents obtain, to the newer Back Bay district in which they opened the pioneer piano store; they are, therefore, in close touch with the musical centre of the city, and have a large rental list among the students and musicians. They are within three minutes walk of the Huntington Ave. and Trinity Place Stations, and the Newton Cars at Copley Square are within a stone's throw, so that their warerooms are the most convenient for residents of the Newton's to visit, and if any of our readers are interested in a piano, we are sure they will be well repaid by a call on Messrs. Schirmer & Co.

HE WAS CONSCIENTIOUS

Newton Centre Man Offered to Pay Fine in Advance

Cornelius Murphy, a 60-year old gardener living on Mills street, Newton Centre, is nothing if not conscientious. Finding that he was going to get drunk Saturday he went to the police court and offered to pay a fine of $5 in advance. A cell was his only reward.

The aged man hitched up a small express wagon and drove from Newton Centre to the court. There was a mild sensation when he walked up to the rail during the threshing out of a civil case and began a confidential talk with Associate Justice Bacon. He kept his hat on and his big dog was at his heels.

Before he had time to disclose his errand an officer led him from the room. Murphy next wandered into the judge's private office, where he lay down on the floor. He was then locked up and an officer took the horse and dog back to Newton Centre.

In court Monday the man was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness. Then he pleaded not guilty. As he promised to sign the pledge his case was continued to Dec. 29 in order to give the aged man a chance.

Burdett College, 18 Boylston St., Boston, is the school of "Actual Business from the Start" where students do not theorize about business but actually DO the things which they will CONTINUE to do after they have entered counting room life. The College where a genuine system of TOUCH Typewriting is taught and where ACCURACY and SPEED are acquired in Short hand. Situation insurance is a feature of Burdett College as it presents each graduate with a Free Life Membership in its Situation Department. The cost for Tuition is $37.50 a term and students are now enrolling for the Fall Term which will begin a week from next Tuesday, Sept. 4th.

Our neighbor, Ward 7, of Newton has been especially favored lately by the appointments of Gov. Guild. The elevation of Hon. William F. Dana to the superior court bench and the selection of ex-Mayor Alonzo R. Weed as gas commissioner speak well for the type of men Newton is putting forward.—Watertown Enterprise.

Now honest, wouldn't you gladly stop baking bread this Summer if you knew for a fact that you could buy bread that would suit the family just as well as your own?

It isn't possible that you enjoy slaving over a hot oven when the thermometer is way up in the eighties.

Just ask for CREAMALT bread (the oval loaf) at your grocer's. Fresh each day—10c.

CENSUS FACTS

Newton Stands High in Many Ways

Per Capita Valuation Double the Average

The student of municipal government, in general, and the citizens of Newton in particular, have occasion to be interested in Bulletin 50 of the National Census Bureau, presenting official statistics for 1904 of cities of 30000 population and over, because Newton is credited with having the largest debt per capita in the United States. 151 cities are covered by the report including population, area, financial transactions, debts and municipal properties. New York stands first in both population and area, the latter being 209,218 acres. Newton with 11,410 acres stands fiftieth in point of area, and 126 in population. Figures are given of the cost of running the different branches of municipal activity, and it is interesting to note the variations in the several departments. For this purpose comparison will only be made with the 67 cities having populations from 30,000 to 50,000 and known as Group IV. Newton stands 7th in expenses of mayor's office, 4th in that of city clerk, 2d in its city treasurer's first in cost of assessing, 7th in legal expenses, 3rd in police, 11th in fire, 1st in cost of highways, 4th in salaries paid for elementary education, and first again in salaries paid for high school purposes.

The per capita expenses of Newton as compared with the average, are as follows:—General government, average 1.35, Newton, 1.81; police, average, 1.96, Newton 1.97; fire, average 1.42, Newton 1.82; charities, average .89, Newton .99; highways average 1.69, Newton 4.54; education, average, 5.10, Newton 8.22; teacher's salaries, average 2.90, Newton 4.66.

While wide spread publicity has been given the fact that Newton stands first in its per capita net debt of $125.38 the average for the whole country being but $37.81, not so much has been heard of the equally important fact that Newton is easily first in its per capita valuation of $1,767.18 the general average of Group IV being $523.07. In the entire country, Newton stands second in this item being led only by Boston with its $2,104.31 valuation per capita.

Moreover our assessed valuation of nearly $64,000,000 is first in Group IV and is only exceeded by what can be termed the great cities in the whole list. The same is true when the valuation is divided into real and personal property, Newton outranking all cities of its own class and leading many of far larger population in both divisions of its valuation.

In the value of its productive salable possessions, Newton is credited with its water works and stands third in Group IV. In the value of its salable, but unproductive possessions, we are first, our school property being valued at $1,329,830, and our park lands at $250,000.

It will therefore be seen that our city stands pretty well in other respects, as well as in that of its per capita debt, and a $1,767.18 per capita valuation fully offsets the $125.38 per capita debt.

In one important feature the Census Bulletin fails to give light, and that is the relative percentage of municipal debt to municipal valuation. It is important because what would be a heavy burden for one municipality would be an ordinary incident in the life of another. The vital point in considering the matter of municipal debt, is not so much the amount, as the ability to carry and to liquidate the burden. The Graphic has had this percentage figured for the entire group of 151 cities, and it is interesting to note that while Newton stands first in its per capita debt, that debt is but .071 of its valuation, and 63 cities of the 151 have a larger percentage of debt to valuation than Newton. Sioux City, Iowa, with .300 and Bryan's home city of Lincoln, Neb., with .298 leading the list in this respect.

It should be borne in mind that the above figures are based on 1904 reports, and that heavy payments have been made in our debt during the years 1905 and 1906, so that at the present time, Newton stands even better in these comparisons than in 1904 and viewed in a broad way, no resident of our city need fear criticism of its financial, or municipal standing from either within or without.

A young woman called at a house where a maid was wanted. She asked the mistress of the house if they had any children, to which she replied that they had five. "Then I can't work for you," said the girl. "Oh, do stay," said the woman, "we will kill the children!"

One of the best tests of the standard of a school is the distance from which it draws pupils. During the past year pupils have attended this School from six states of the Union; from Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick; and there has been one representative from across the Atlantic.

Another test is the educational qualifications of the pupils. During the past year the School has been attended by graduates of Radcliffe, Ann Arbor, Cornell, and Dartmouth; and by graduates of Maine, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts state normal schools.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

I was very glad to see the protest in your last edition against the spending money on that rain gauge—snow gauge—and fence in Farlow Park.

By whose authority was this little bit of ground taken from the people of Newton for this useless, silly purpose, and now to add to the silliness of the whole thing, to the absurdity I see that they have put up a notice that trespassing "on this land will be prosecuted!"

Who can prosecute me or any one from the use of a public park? Of course picking flowers, injuring the grounds, can be punished but who has the right to stop any proper use of the Park by any person?

FUNDS WERE SHORT

Clerk at Highlands Post Office Suspended

Investigation of Accounts of William Dawson

Because of irregularities in his accounts William Dawson, clerk-in-charge at the Newton Highlands postal station, was Wednesday morning suspended pending an investigation by the department.

Postoffice inspectors started an investigation, and it is expected that their report will be ready soon. The irregularities were first discovered Tuesday afternoon by Postmaster George H. Morgan of the main postoffice at Newton Centre, when in the regular course of business he counted up the money and stamps in the Newton Highlands office.

"I do not believe that the shortage was due to dishonesty, but is due to carelessness," said Postmaster Morgan. "Mr. Dawson had for nearly 10 years been in the service of the department and had proven a faithful and competent employee."

The exact amount of the shortage is not yet known, but Postmaster Morgan added Wednesday morning that Mr. Dawson had voluntarily turned over to the department enough money to cover the shortage as quickly as he was informed of the condition of the books.

William Dawson first entered the postal service as a clerk in the Newton postal station in 1897. Here he served satisfactorily up to September, 1900, when he was transferred to Newton Upper Falls and promoted to the position of superintendent of the local office. On March 1 last he was again promoted, this time becoming clerk-in-charge at Newton Highlands, succeeding Capt. Edgar N. Nash, one of the oldest post-office employees in this city, who retired from active work after many years' service.

Mr. Dawson is 32 years old and is married. His home is at 48 Pettee street, Newton Upper Falls. He is a well known member of the Newton Upper Falls village improvement association, attends the Methodist Episcopal church at that place and is well known and popular throughout that vicinity.

The many friends of Mr. Dawson regret that irregularities have occurred in the accounts, but they believe the condition is not due to dishonesty on the part of Mr. Dawson.

Alfred S. Pratt, a clerk in the Newton Centre postoffice, was placed in charge of the Newton Highlands office temporarily. Mr. Pratt was previously connected with the Highlands office for a number of years until he was transferred to the main office at Newton Centre last spring.

S. B. HINCKLEY DEADHead of Chelsea Bank Which was Closed*Long Identified with Cordage Manufacturing

After an illness of several months' duration, Sylvester Baxter Hinckley, president of the First national bank of Chelsea, which recently was compelled to close its doors, died at his home, 93 South street, Chestnut Hill, about 7 o'clock Sunday evening. The members of his family and the physician who attended him during his last illness, Dr. Robert P. Loring of Newton Centre, were at the aged man's bedside when he passed away.

His illness was caused by enlargement of the liver and at the time the bank officials ordered the doors of the Chelsea institution closed, he was in bed and was then said to be a dying man. It has been claimed by the friends of Pres. Hinckley that if he had not been confined to his home by his illness he would have been enabled to make good the losses of the bank and to have cleared a fortune on his real estate investments as well.

Sylvester Baxter Hinckley was born in Yarmouth in 1841 and was, therefore, 65 years old. He passed his boyhood in Chelsea, receiving his early education there, finishing in a classical school in Newton.

In the early years of his manhood he was in business in Washington, D. C., and afterward in New York city. It was in 1865, just at the close of the civil war, that he went into business with his father, Freeman Hinckley, under the firm name of Hinckley Bros. & Co., in the cordage manufacturing and selling trade.

This business is still carried on at the old office on Commercial street, Boston, but as Mr. Hinckley retired from active business in this line about 14 years ago, the cordage business is now conducted by his son, Sylvester B. Hinckley Jr. Another son, Sumner P. Hinckley, is in the real estate business.

Since retiring from the cordage business, Mr. Hinckley has interested himself wholly in financial and real estate matters. In addition to his presidency of the defunct First national bank of Chelsea, he was operating several large real estate deals, upon which, had his health not given out, it is claimed by those knowing the facts he would have cleared over $1,000,000.

For some time Mr. Hinckley had been suffering from enlargement of the liver, and had not been in his downtown office in the Devonshire building for nearly three months. For over a month he had been confined to his home.

When the news of the closing of the First national bank of Chelsea became public, President Hinckley was confined to his bed, and in fact, was so weak that in transferring the title in certain parcels of real estate in the Back Bay and in Brighton to the bank he was unable to write his own name, and was just able to make his mark on the papers, this act being witnessed by his wife and one of his sons. He put his mark to the transfers as he lay in bed, and Vice President Martin of the bank was at his side during the transaction. Turn rule for funeral.

In his magnificent home on South street the funeral of Mr. Hinckley took place Tuesday afternoon. Simple services were conducted beginning at 2 o'clock by Rev. Dr. Weeks, a former pastor of the Brighton Unitarian church and a long time friend of the family.

The funeral was attended only by the immediate family. The body lay in a handsome casket in one of the big front rooms of the dwelling, covered with a number of floral tokens. The services were of the simplest nature.

The body was then carried to a hearse, in which it was taken to Forest Hills. Here the remains were cremated. The body was accompanied to the crematory by several members of the family, who later took charge of the ashes.

"CHIN ON" WAS CUTIt Proved Costly for Whalen to Fight with Chinaman

Martin J. Whalen, 27 years old, of 246 Derby street, and Chin On, a 40-year old Chinaman living at 1389 Washington street, West Newton, were arrested at 12:30 Monday morning by Patrolman David Neagle at Houghton's corner, West Newton, on a charge of assault and battery. The Chinaman was considerably cut. In court Whalen was fined $10 and the Chinaman was discharged. Whalen asserted that the Chinaman became angry the night before when Whalen's hat hit him while they were in an electric car coming out from Boston. The Chinaman alleged that Whalen started the trouble himself and had picked on him all the way out from Boston on a late car and then renewed the fight on the street in West Newton.

PARADE OF CANOESNovel Event Attracted Many to River*Prizes Awarded Decorated and Illuminated Craft

After having been postponed several times since early summer because of rain, the long looked forward to illuminated parade of canoes on the Charles river took place under the most favorable auspices Tuesday evening.

The Canoeists' Illumination association was in charge of the affair. Seventeen artistically decorated craft made the start at 8 o'clock from near the float of the Metropolitan park police station. Led by the launch Flirt containing the officials of the affair and officers of the association the vari-colored craft wound slowly down the river to Fox Island, where late in the evening the prize winners were announced.

Mr. S. P. Perry of the Norumbega boat house won the first prize, a valuable canoe with complete fittings. His canoe was one of the most novel of the procession. It carried a small sail trimmed with many small electric lights and decorated with natural flowers. Flowers also decorated the sides of the craft.

The second prize was a pair of canoe cushions. This prize was won by Mr. S. T. Kaulback of Auburndale. Mr. E. F. Carson of the B. A. A. won the third award, a pair of paddles. The fourth went to Mr. L. O. Fowle, also of the B. A. A., who received a pair of outing shoes. The fifth prize, an outing shirt, was won by Mr. H. V. Manning.

No little interest was taken in the awarding of the two special ladies' prizes. The first, a river hat, was won by Misses Mildred Coughlin and Isabelle Coffin of Auburndale. The second, a pair of river shoes, was awarded to Mrs. James T. Burgess of Waltham.

The judges were Representative Edward A. Walker, Atwood J. Jackson and Robert E. Mayall, all of Waltham. It was no easy task for them to select the prize winners, for, although the number of craft in line was not large, each was unusually attractive.

Japanese lanterns were among the decorations on nearly every canoe. Several others were strung with miniature electric lights. As the line proceeded down the river toward Fox island it made a pretty sight. From the Weston bridge and from vantage points on the boat-house floats and along the banks many spectators watched the procession disappear around the bends in the river.

The special officers of the Metropolitan park police station, under Supt. Haberley and Sergt. Chapman, accompanied the parade to Fox island to be on hand in case of an accident. Fortunately there were no tip-overs. The weather conditions were ideal for the affair, hardly a breath of wind stirring the water.

While the prize winners were being selected at Fox island the many canoeists who gathered to see the parade were entertained with a band concert and fireworks. The fireworks were set off from two rafts.

DID $3500 DAMAGEEarly Morning Fire in Unoccupied Newton Highlands House

A fire, which was of unknown origin, gutted a house and stable in Newton Highlands, Sunday morning.

The dwelling was a 2 1/2-story frame dwelling at 499 Winchester street, not far from the Working Boys' Home Industrial School, and had been unoccupied for many months. The stable was but a few rods in the rear. The loss on the two structures was $3500; partly covered by insurance.

The fire was discovered by a neighbor, who caused an alarm to be sounded from box 93 at the Working Boys' Home buildings. The firemen from Newton Highlands and Newton Centre were quickly on the scene, but the flames had gained such a start that it was next to impossible to save the buildings. The fire lighted up the vicinity in a magnificent manner. The property was owned by the Newton Savings Bank.

CROWDS AT CHESTNUT HILLFew Residents Aware That Hundreds Gather There Sundays

Commenting on the Sunday visitors who flock in large numbers each week to Chestnut Hill, the Brighton Item has this to say:

Few residents are aware of the extent to which the grounds about the Chestnut Hill reservoir are used as a pleasure resort.

On pleasant Sundays during the summer large crowds visit the place, attracted by the natural beauties, for there is probably no handsomer spot within the entire Metropolitan district. Last Sunday an enormous crowd visited the place, it being estimated that the Boston elevated brought out 30,000 people during the day. But little provision for the comfort and convenience of such a crowd has been made by the park commission. The drinking fountains are very scarce and Sunday but one was in working order, which was constantly surrounded by a thirsty and suffering crowd of men, women and children. There are but two toilet rooms on the entire grounds, one for the members of either sex and these located at the entrance to the grounds. This is a condition of affairs that the park commission should remedy at once.

ON THE STUMPThere Congressman Weeks Promises to Reply to Gompers

Congressman John W. Weeks and his family returned to Boston on the White Star line Arabic from Liverpool, Saturday, and heard for the first time the report that he had been put on the blacklist by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. The report gave him considerable surprise.

Congressman Weeks went abroad on the Kaiser William from New York and gave his wife and family a surprise in London. They had been touring the continent since June and Mr. Weeks went over three weeks ago to return with them. In regard to his being on President Gompers' blacklist, Mr. Weeks said he did not care to enter into any controversy with Gompers at this time, but in the fall when he gets on the stump he will be pleased to take up any statements which Mr. Gompers has made.

The Weeks party consisted of Mrs. Weeks and her two children, Charles S. Weeks and Miss Katherine Weeks.

ALDEN SPEARE DAYOne Trip of Floating Hospital an Annual Gift

Saturday morning women carrying babies in arms, whose emaciated little forms told that sickness had fastened upon them, could be seen hastening towards the Boston floating hospital.

After they had passed the cordon of physicians, whose duty it is to see that the patients have no contagious diseases, they stepped on board and placed the helpless babies in the white cots that had been arranged on the upper deck. When the boat started, at 9 o'clock, there were about 80 patients in the permanent ward and as many more on the outer deck, including well and sick children and 75 mothers on board.

It was Alden Speare memorial day, given by Mrs. Alden Speare of Newton Centre, an annual gift in memory of her husband.

Probably on account of the cool weather there were fewer out-door patients then there have been during the week, but this was appreciated by the nurses and others whose work have been so hard on account of the unusually large influx of patients during the hot wave. One infant whose physician said that nothing but the floating hospital could cure was taken on board. A belated mother and baby reached the boat just as the gang plank was being taken in, and although it necessitated much effort they were taken on board.

A San Francisco sufferer came to manager Briggs and told him that her doctor said that trips on the hospital would do her good. Mr. Briggs replied that he had been obliged to refuse children 12 years old and he must decline to take her.

Dr. and Mrs. Irving Fisher of West Newton took the trip down the harbor.

NONANTUMSCHOOL GARDENSPrizes will be Awarded Later to Sixteen Children

The children dressed in their best clothes and the carefully cultivated little plots showing to the best advantage, the first annual inspection of the Nonantum school gardens which took place Saturday afternoon was a most successful one. The purpose of the inspection was to determine to some extent what pupils will be in line for the prizes which are to be awarded the middle of next month.

The 25 gardens in each of the four well cared for rows were carefully scanned. Practically every one of them was well cultivated and of neat appearance. To the children having these gardens four prizes for the best plots in each row will be awarded later. The children are doing their utmost to win the 16 prizes which will be offered. The judges who made the inspection were Joseph L. Caverly and Charles Haskell of Newton and Charles Cabot and Abbott Bassett of Newtonville.

The school gardens have been conducted in connection with the work of the Nonantum vacation school, but have been under the direct supervision of the Newton Social Science club. The club tried the experiment for the first time this season and the members are well satisfied with its success.

The Commissioners of the Massachusetts Nautical Training School have received a cable from Commander Low, announcing the arrival of the Enterprize at Madeira, on the 28th inst. All well on board.

—One of the largest boilers ever seen in this vicinity was installed Friday in the plant of the American Mica company. In order to give the men employed in putting in the boiler every opportunity of completing the job without inconvenience the plant was closed for the day. A large number of interested spectators watched the work of putting in and setting up the boiler.

—There is considerable complaint heard from the residents of this district over the recent repairing of the sidewalks on the Washington street bridge over the Charles river. The city of Newton had the plank laid laid away from the easterly end and the town of Wellesley had it laid laid away from the westerly end. The planking on the Newton side is about an inch higher than that laid by Wellesley. The result has been that many pedestrians have the last week or two come to grief by stumbling over the projecting ends of the Newton planks while crossing the bridge.

TELEPHONE THIEF CAUGHT

Gateley Admitted Robbing Booths in This City

Charles J. Gateley of Washington street, Boston, who was arrested in Malden Friday afternoon for robbing telephone pay stations in Malden, confessed that he was the man who has been operating extensively in this vicinity. He said he had been robbing these machines for the past two months and had broken into machines in Boston, Brookline, Newton, Somerville, Arlington, Lexington and Malden. In this city the principal breaks to the machines were made in Waban and other places on the south side of the city by Gateley. He was very frank in his confession. He said the machines netted him from 40 cents to $5 per break. In the Malden district court Saturday Gateley was sentenced to 60 days in the house of correction and fined $10.

The September water bills will soon remind us that nothing has been done as yet to return the present excess receipts
to the water takers. The credit balance of nearly ten thousand dollars for 1906
will be augmented in 1907 by the elimination of the interest and sinking fund requirements on the $250,000 bonds paid
last July and with the usual increase in receipts, something over twenty thousand dollars will be the profit for the water department for 1907. This satisfactory balance should be returned to the citizens in one of three ways at least and possibly by a combination of two of them.
The first and possibly the method which will reach the most people is the abolition of the present annual charge of $1.50
meter rent. This will affect about 6000 water takers and reduce the surplus some $9000. A second method which has advocates is to reduce the minimum price for water from $10 to $8 per annum. This will benefit the small water user without affecting the person who pays more than the minimum price. A third method is to reduce the price of water from 35 to 30 cents per 1000 gallons. This will benefit the large user without affecting the small consumer.
We are inclined to advocate the abolition of the meter rent and the reduction of the price to 30 cents per thousand gallons as a method which will confer the most benefit upon the greatest number.
It is important that the public should agitate this question early and often, as the reduction in price must come through an amendment to the water ordinance
which always takes considerable time.
Instruct your alderman to "Reduce the water rates."

Notice is printed in another column
calling attention to the time for filing nomination papers for delegates to the various conventions and for nominations for representatives from this city. There will probably be but a single ticket filed for delegates in each ward,
as Newton has no divided feelings on the various offices. Prominent gentlemen will represent the city at the state convention, where no contests of any account
are to be settled. All are in favor of Mr.
Seward W. Jones' candidacy for Councillor from this district, and equal unanimity for the renomination of Congressman Weeks. The County delegations may see some fun over the expected opposition to the renomination of County Commissioner Upham of Waltham, but that is the only sign of life on the political horizon. For senator, Newton delegates will be unpledged and it is hoped will unanimously and heartily support
the candidate who secures the most delegates from the country end of the district. Common sense and political expediency demand such a course. For representatives, there will be four candidates for the three seats. Representative John F. Lothrop should be returned,
and for the other places the names mentioned are those of William F. Garcel-lon, who is almost certain to be nominated, Alderman Elias B. Bishop and ex-alderman Oliver M. Fisher. The city will make no mistake in its choice among these gentlemen.

It is said that one of the planks in Moran's platform for gubernatorial honors is an attack upon Governor Guild for his appointments to the bench. We believe that Governor Guild has appointed two judges, Judge Baker of Brookline
to the new juvenile court and Judge William F. Dana of Newton to the Superior Court. We have every reason to believe that the Moran plank is aimed directly at the appointment of Judge Dana and we have absolute conviction that such an attack will prove a political boomerang. It is seldom that judicial honors go to those who do not seek or aspire to the office and when a Governor tenders the highest honor in his gift to the man whom he personally believes to be capable of filling the office, it is equally creditable to "him who gives and who receives". Judge Dana's appointment is a credit to Governor Guild and his splendid administration.

Preparations are now being made in hundreds of homes for the school session
which begins one week from next Monday. Present indications point to a large increase in the school attendance, and a future demand for more and larger school houses.

While there has been a large reduction in the tax rate of the present year, our tax payers should not be too sanguine for the future. Next year's rate seems bound to be larger than that of 1906.

TWO FIRES STOPPED Quick Work Saved Bad Conflagrations

One was in Store in Nonantum Square District

Quick work in extinguishing a fire by Patrolman William J. Kiley in an unoccupied house at 195 Lowell avenue, Sunday morning, doubtless saved the dwelling from destruction.

Patrolman Kiley was patrolling his beat when he discovered a blaze in the lower floor of the structure. Unable to force open a door or window he was obliged to break a rear window in order to gain an entrance. He was then able to quickly extinguish the flames. The damage amounted to about $25. The fire is believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion among oily clothes left in the house by painters,
who had been at work there the day before.

Shortly after 2 Monday morning
Sergeant Burke and Patrolman Dow discovered a fire in the fruit store at 250
Washington street, Nonantum square, which was burning briskly. The policemen forced an entrance into the building and extinguished the blaze. The damage amounted to about $10. Rats and matches were probably the cause. Had the blaze not been discovered when it was a serious fire would have doubtless resulted for the store is in the midst of several wooden business blocks.

CLAIMS MARRIAGE ILLEGAL

Newton Woman asks Annulment of Ceremony

Mrs. F. B. Maynard, who resides with her parents at Newton, and who
for the past two years has lived under her maiden name, Ruth L. Stanton, has asked for an annulment of her marriage to Frederick Maynard, on the ground that it was illegal, says a dispatch from Worcester, which was sent out this week.

In her petition Mrs. Maynard alleges that she was married to Maynard, under the laws of New Hampshire, in November, 1904. She states that in November, 1902, Maynard married another woman, and that this woman secured a divorce under the laws of the Granite State.

The divorce did not become absolute until May, 1903, and Maynard was not to marry again for two years.

When Ruth Stanton found that Maynard had been married previously, and that according to law she was not his lawful wife, he did not wait to see what would happen, but skipped out, and no one has seen him since.

Newton Hospital

A special meeting of the Board of Trustees was held at the hospital on the afternoon of August 23rd, and matters
of interest were presented by President Leeson and Dr. Hunt, chairman of the executive committee.

Reference was made to the completion of the work attending the reconstruction
of the several buildings and to the generous gifts which have been made by individuals and societies in the interest of this work.

The Trustees appreciate most heartily
the co-operation of those who have shown themselves to be such friends of the Hospital, and the thanks of the Board were recorded in the following resolutions:

That the sincere thanks of the Board
be extended to the Newton Hospital Aid Association for its most generous gift of money with which to erect and equip the new Domestic Building and connecting rooms, and for the further gift of money which has enabled the Matron to provide new awnings for the balcony to the Eldredge Ward and for that used by the private patients.

That the sincere thanks of the Board
be extended to the Newtonville Women's Guild and to Mr. and Mrs. Chas.
W. Leonard, who together have furnished most attractively the Matron's room, the Guest room and the rooms occupied by the House Officer.

That the sincere thanks of the Board
be extended to Mrs. Wilkins who, as Chairman of the Committee, has been untiring in her efforts.

That the sincere thanks of the Board
be extended to Mrs. W. H. Coolidge for the beautiful furnishings in the physician's room, complete to the minutest detail.

That the sincere thanks of the Board
be extended to Mr. J. L. Richards for his most welcome gifts of furnishings
for the Reception room.

That the sincere thanks of the Board
be extended to the R. H. White Co., through its Treasurer, Mr. Preston, for the very generous gift of a rug which is to be furnished for the Matron's office.

That the sincere thanks of the Board
be extended to the Chairman of the Building Committee for all that he has done during the period of reconstruction.

MR. MONTGOMERY A WINNER

Newtonville Man Took Honors in Jefferson Highlands Tennis

In the tennis tournament just completed at Jefferson Highlands, Mt.
Washington, in which a large number of well-known summer residents were interested, the winner of the singles was
Mr. George S. Montgomery of Park place, Newtonville.

Mr. Montgomery played an excellent game throughout the tournament, which lasted several days. In the third round
he and Mr. E. Carter were the winners.
In the final round Mr. Montgomery handily defeated his crack opponent, taking the sets in 8-6, 5-7 and 6-2.

Briggs who moves from Eliot.

A. J. McDonald has sold to J. S. B.
Knox the new house and 1750 feet of land, numbered 26 Saxon road, corner Saxon terrace, Newton Highlands. The house is new and not yet assessed. The price was $8500. Alvord Bros. represented the purchaser and A. D. Dowd
the seller.

Alvord Bros. have sold for the Newton Savings Bank to C. A. Barrett, the estate numbered 43 Bowdoin street, Newton Highlands, consisting of a frame house and 19,760 feet of land,
the whole being assessed for $6200. Alvord Bros. have leased to J. K. Emmett for George B. Dickerman, the house at 10 Harrison street, Eliot, and the house at 24 Tarleton road, for Mrs. Lunt, to J. M. O. Hewitt, as well as suites in the Marion at Newton, to Charles E. Rees
and A. T. S. Clay.

ONE LONE SENATOR

Framingham Wants One and Wants Him Badly

In discussing the situation in the senatorial district, the Framingham Gazette looks at the situation in this light:
This hot weather people in general
are taking very little interest in politics
but the politicians are active.

The chief interest thus far is the Senatorship. Newton men feel generally as if the senator this year should come from this end of the district.

It happens that Framingham has two candidates for the position and there is likely to be a warm contest to secure the delegation from here.

After two years of satisfactory service
in the lower house the friends of S. O.
Staples feel that he is entitled to promotion and in due time his candidacy
was generally announced.

While in the House Mr. Staples gave very careful attention particularly to the wants of his own district, studying general state legislation on broad business principles. He was appointed to important positions in committee work
and had an extensive acquaintance
among the law makers at the State House. Being a long time business man in New England and always identified with Republican politics, he was and is in close touch with the men and measure of the present time. There seems no good reason why his townsmen should not endorse his candidacy for the Senate.

But C. J. McPherson wants the support of the Framingham delegation as a candidate for the senate, and with his friends they are making a hustle for votes in the caucus. A club or organization has been effected and all the votes
possible are being attracted to his banner. The Boston Herald and Globe were chosen to announce his candidacy and their articles are all toned to give him
the appearance of leading. But if we mistake not Framingham voters will select the senatorial delegation from that town.

Mr. McPherson went to the legislature two terms a few years ago and was defeated for re-election.

His defeat seemed to be first because he devoted time and energy to matters
in which his particular district had no direct interest, while the things asked for by his constituents were shunted to one side.

His votes were found to be in accordance with the wishes of the great corporations, particularly the railroads,
and in a town like Framingham, where
so many railroad employees reside,
there was resentment of his votes which gave the corporation more power over its employe. The railroad men looked up Mr. McPherson's votes on measures connected with the lease of the Boston & Albany to the New York Central, and the conditions sought to be imposed and these were the great element in his defeat.

Having been shown to be favorable to the corporations it is only natural that the great corporation newspapers should be his sponsors and that Boston interest
show back of his campaign.

MCWAIN--SPENCER

Newton Centre Man Marries Rice School Principal

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George B.
Murray of Malden, Wednesday noon,
when Miss Alice Spencer became the bride of Mr. D. Ernest McWain of Newton Centre. The bride is well known in Newton Centre, having for two years
been principal of the Rice grammar school.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. T.
C. Cleveland of Gloucester. The couple were unattended and the ceremony was witnessed only by immediate relatives.
After the ceremony the couple left for a long trip, which will include a visit to the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs.
H. K. Spencer of Kansas City, Kan.

Upon their return they will reside at 219 Commonwealth avenue, Chestnut Hill, where they will be at home to their friends after Nov. 1.

Burns--Maloney

Miss Hanorah C. Maloney, daughter of Mr. Michael Maloney of Needham,
and Mr. John A. Burns of Williams street, Newton, were married Tuesday evening at the parochial residence of St. Mary's church, Newton Upper Falls,
by Rev. Timothy J. Danahy.

Nugent--Desmond

The wedding of Miss Mary E. Desmond, daughter of Mr. Thomas Desmond of Ward street, Newton Centre,
and Mr. Edward H. Nugent of Morse street, Newton, took place Sunday at the parochial residence of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre.
The officiating clergyman was Rev. James F. Haney.

Fire in Upper Falls Store

Fire broke out in the lower floor of the store of Samuel Rosen on Mechanic street, Newton Upper Falls, shortly after 7 Tuesday morning, for which an alarm was sounded from box 631. The blaze was quickly extinguished with a loss of only $15. The cause is unknown.

ARRESTED IN A LAUNDRY

Young Woman with two Names Sent to Sherborn

There was something of a puzzle in the police court Thursday to determine the identity of the pretty 18-year old girl
arrested in a Nonantum Chinese laundry
on a charge of idle and disorderly conduct. When arrested the young woman,
a striking blonde, said she was Eva Write of Main street, Waltham. This morning she changed her name to Esther
M. Livingston, and said that she lived at 845 Church street, Springfield. She was sentenced to Sherborn.

The young woman declared she was a graduate nurse of the Springfield city hospital. To Lieut. William P. Soule she previously stated that she had never been in Springfield in her life.

for breach of the condition of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing
the same, will be sold at public auction
upon the premises described in said mortgage on Wednesday, Sept. 26, 1906 at 2
o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular,
the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed to wit:—

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon in that part of Newton in the County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, called Nonantum, beginning at a point on Watertown Street, fifty (50) feet westerly from land now or late of Stuart, thence running southeasterly on land now or late of Joseph N. Bacon
by a line nearly parallel to the southwesterly boundary of said Stuart's land about one hundred and forty five (145) feet to a point; fifty (50) feet distant southwesterly from Stuart's land; thence turning and running southeasterly on land now or late of Brunel, fifty (50) feet to other land of the said Bacon; thence turning and running northwesterly on land of the said Bacon
about one hundred and forty nine (149)
feet to Watertown Street; thence turning and running northeasterly on Watertown Street (as indicated by red line on plan hereinafter referred to,) fifty (50) feet to the point of beginning, containing by estimation about 7,350 square feet of land,
more or less, being the same premises conveyed to me by Louis Burofski by deed dated Sept. 29, 1905 and recorded with Middlesex S. D. Deeds Lb. 3190 fol. 46
and being lot number 3 and bounded on
"old line of street" shown on plan drawn by E. S. Smilie, December 22, 1892, recorded with deed of John C. Potter to said Bacon.

Said premises will be sold subject to any
and all unpaid taxes, liens, and assessments.

$200. will be required to be paid in cash
by the purchaser at time and place of sale;
other terms at sale.

TABLE ARRANGED FOR RED LUNCHEON.

Exactness recognizes no place for "millinery" in table decorations. However if restricted to luncheon or reception tables some pleasing effects are gained. To arrange a duplicate of the table set for a luncheon for four, first cover the polished table with a lace edged square of linen which comes to within an inch of the edge. Fill a tall, clear green glass vase with scarlet geranium blossoms and plenty of green foliage. Set the vase on a square hemstitched linen centrepiece surrounded by a broad red ribbon matching the geraniums in color. Make clusters of large ribbon loops at opposite corners of the square and place cut glass bouillon and olive dishes on the other two where the ribbon is merely folded over.

In the illustration the covers are arranged for the four and little paper cases surrounded with red crepe paper frills are set on tiny fringed linen squares on red bordered china plates. A teaspoon is laid at the right, although some might prefer a fork. Red and green apples in a green Japanese bowl add to the color effect. For the fruit course finger bowls should be brought on small doilies on decorated china plates and a fruit knife laid beside each. The black coffee is to be served on demi-tasse. The napkins should be of medium size of fine linen and with initial or monogram embroidered in long slender letters. The menu might include clear tomato soup in bouillon cups, braised pigeons with dumplings and potato puff, celery with mayonnaise dressing to tomato jelly, an ice decorated with candied cherries, fruit and coffee. Add to this list as taste suggests but it is better to err on the side of few dishes rather than offer a confusion of good things at one luncheon.

Base Ball.

The Y. M. C. A. team was defeated last Saturday at Brookline by the Brookline Y. M. C. A. by a score of 9-4. Up to the 7th inning the boys had a lead of two runs, but a combination of errors in the outfield and a couple of well timed hits resulted in 5 runs being scored by the Brookline team. Nelson for Newton excelled at the bat, getting three hits out of four times up. He also struck out 11 of the opposing team. Bartley did good work behind the bat considering that the position was new to him.

On Labor Day morning at 10.30 o'clock the famous Page Class of Roxbury will be the attraction at Cabot Park. This team leads the Sunday school league of Boston and a grand game may be expected as the Y. M. C. A. team is looking for revenge for last week's defeat. Nelson and Wharton will do the battery work for Newton with Martin and Jones officiating for the Page Class. As Mr. Chase of West Newton returns home from his vacation this week, the infield of the local team will be complete with the exception of end base, which Carl Howard of the intermediate team is holding down very acceptably during Bradley's absence.

WELL KNOWN CHARACTER

"Charlie" Reed of Newton Centre was Nearly 100

One of the best known characters of Newton Centre passed away Wednesday, when Charlie Reed, an aged colored man, died at his home, 754 Beacon street, after a lingering illness of several weeks. Reed did not know his exact age but it is asserted by many of his acquaintances that he came very close to being 100 years old.

For upward of 40 years he had made his home in Newton Centre and earned his own living. He cared for the lawns of many residents of that village and did general chores, occasionally taking care of some of the church edifices. He was a veteran of the war of the rebellion and for many years marched regularly with the members of Charles Ward Post 62, G. A. R., on Memorial day. He was not a member of the post.

It was about a score of years ago that Reed came into considerable local prominence in an accidental poisoning case. At that time he was employed by a family named Adams living at Cypress and Paul streets. One day he was sent to a drug store to secure some compound licorice powders. The clerk by mistake took a substance which proved to be poison from a wrong jar and gave it to Reed. The old colored man carried it back to the house and Mrs. Adams and a young woman member of the family took the powder internally believing it was licorice powders. They became critically ill and it was only by long work of physicians that their lives were saved. In the investigation which took place Reed was cleared of all blame in the matter, but for a long time he seemed to think he was partly responsible for the mistake.

HELD UP LITTLE GIRL

Boys Then Took Cigarettes in Nonantum Store

In the juvenile session of the police court Tuesday two Nonantum lads were arraigned on a charge of having held up and robbed little Mary Baker daughter of Louis Baker, in a store at Crafts and Clinton streets. The boys were John O'Halloran, 15, of Faxon street, and Thomas Bryson, 16, of Lincoln road. Testimony brought out the assertion that the lads came into the store when the little girl was the only one in charge. It was alleged that they held her up and robbed the place of tobacco and cigarettes. They were found guilty and the cases were continued to Dec. 4 to give the lads a chance to be better.

Sold Cigarettes to Boy

Carteau Santello, who conducts a store on Watertown street, Nonantum, was Tuesday charged in court with having sold cigarettes last Saturday to Ellis Burgess, a minor, who lives just over the line in Watertown. He was fined $5.

CONDUIT WAS CUT

Watertown Consequently Had No Telephone Service

By the blunder of workmen demolishing the old bridge between Newton and Watertown, who cut the conduit and 760 telephone wires, every telephone in Watertown, some over 800, was put out of business Tuesday. Besides the Watertown system, all the trunk lines connecting Newton with Cambridge, Waltham, Medford, Malden and Somerville were demolished, and for a number of days it will be necessary to make all connections with those cities through the Boston exchanges.

The old structure is being pulled down to make room for a new bridge across the river at that point, and the work of demolition is going on under the supervision of Superintendent of Streets W. F. Learned of Watertown. Tuesday he discovered the conduit that carries the 760 double wires of the telephone company, besides the trunk lines leading to Newton.

Correspondence

A well known Anburydale resident has written us the following appreciative letter:

Dear Sir:—

I wish to thank you and THE GRAPHIC for the very interesting article on the census question as applied to taxation in Newton. I had been hoping that somebody would take the pains to investigate these facts and present them in this form. Newton's municipal plant is now so well established that it is well to keep before our citizens, who do not all seem to appreciate it, the fact that we have a great many tangible assets for our past expenditures, many of which will never have to be renewed or duplicated; and that the maintenance of these, together with such further improvements as will be due to our growth, will easily be within the scope of our income on a reasonable basis of taxation. The reduction in the city's debt, combined with the reduction in the rate of taxation, suggests that we have reached a long hoped for turning point.

By the way, have you ever mentioned another important census figure concerning Newton, viz., that it is the first city in the United States, large or small, in its percentage of female residents?

Perhaps in view of this interesting fact we can chivalrously afford to look upon our standing in the debt column as after all a minor detail.

Fall Disinfecting

Is there anything more important to the health of the family than putting the home in a perfectly sanitary condition for the coming winter? Sanitary cleanliness by which the process of bactericidal life harmful to health is arrested and overcome, is occupying a very prominent place in the up-to-date housekeeper's mind. A little Sulpho-Naphthol, one of the strongest bactericides known to science, in every pail of water used for cleansing, gives a condition of cleanliness and purity which is the highest point reached in home sanitation today. Sulpho-Naphthol has revolutionized modern ideas of housecleaning.

Nomination papers for the Republican Primaries to be held on TUESDAY, SEPT. 25th, will be issued from the office of the Secretary of the Republican City Committee of Newton at the office of the Secretary, Room 1, Masonic Block, Newtonville, on SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1906, at 3 P. M.

Nomination papers may be filed with said Secretary at his said office, Room 1, Masonic Block, Newtonville, at 3 P. M., on WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 12, 1906, and all nomination papers must be filed with said Secretary at his said office before 5 P. M. of said WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1906.

Per Order, Republican City Committee, CHARLES E. HATFIELD, Chairman.

ALBERT P. CARTER, Secretary.

Our whole stock of WALL PAPERS has got to go. As it is our policy never to carry goods over from one season to another, we have decided to "split the prices" on the balance stock of our

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC WALL PAPERS

by sacrificing every roll at "Half the Original Prices." We haven't an extra large stock left, but what we have, is a good assortment, so you'd better get in on this right away.

After selecting your Wall Paper, don't miss visiting our upholstery department where our prices are marked down to keep our Wall Paper company.

ASK THE SUMMER HOTEL MAN.

AND IT WAS TIME THE CURTAIN WAS RUNG DOWN.

With the distinguished autoists, who figured in the district court last week, and the Readville pool sellers, with former Attorney General Parker, as counsel, this week, together with the labor trouble at the Cochran mill, Dedham has certainly occupied the center of the stage in the public eye, and the time light has been turned on to its full capacity.—Dedham Transcript.

"THE LINE IS BUSY; PLEASE RING OFF."

The merchants about town who have telephones in both their stores and homes are never in doubt when closing time arrives. About that time of day if you happen to be in the store or place of business you will hear the telephone tingle and if you will just keep your ears open you will judge from replies that the better half on the other end of the line is mighty anxious to know when her spouse will start for home for supper. Mr. Jones is a warhorse in politics, having been chairman of the political committees of Ex-Congressman Powers, Capt. Weeks and Lieut.-Gov. Draper. He has always played a fair game, has always won and has come out of the contests with the respect of his opponents. He served for 15 years on Newton's board of health and has been for some years on the state board of insanity. He is a successful business man, being at the head of the Jones Brothers' Granite company.—Watertown Enterprise.

This experiment has been tried and proven and many are the broken dishes which were thought to be useless which are now as good as new.—Hingham Journal.

A PSALM OF LIFE

A few days ago the Baltimore Sun said:

Tell us not that raw cucumbers
Are so awful to digest;
For, though they disturb one's slumbers,
We must satisfy our zest.

Says a poet we've heard tell on,
But the name-on-each-piece-candy
Is the luscious watermelon.

It has been passed along and exchanges on the table this morning show:

Nothing sweeter can you find,
But, dear bards, forget not reason,

The Old Silver Dollar

A country editor has been inspired after looking over his list of delinquent subscribers to compose the following:

"How dear to our heart is the old silver dollar,

When some kind subscriber presents it to view;

The Liberty head without necktie or collar,

And all the strange things which to us seem so new;

The wide-spreading eagle, the arrows below it,

The stars and the words with the strange things they tell;

The coin of our fathers, we're glad that we knew it,

For some time or other 'twill come in right well;

The spread-eagle dollar, the star-spangled dollar,

The old silver dollar we all love so well.

—Garrettsville (Ohio) Journal.

Asking "Why Is Ice so dear?" the Providence Journal fails to discover satisfaction in any answer that is given by the ice dealers. That newspaper goes so far as to say that the talk about a "famine" is, of course, exaggeration, and that the exaggeration offers no good reason for doubling and trebling prices.

It asserts that there are large reserve stores of ice this season as there always are—an assertion which we think is not true of the situation as it exists in New Bedford. If there are large reserve stores of ice for this city, they are at a considerable distance. But the observation of the Journal that "it is difficult to understand why the price to the consumer should be as high in Providence as in Philadelphia, which is further away from the Maine ice houses" can be amended by substituting New Bedford for Providence, and be extremely pertinent. Nor, as the Providence newspaper points out, is the talk which is made about the great waste in handling ice exactly convincing. Waste in the ice can be no different this year from what it is in other years. The shrinkage is determined by the temperature as it stood in January.

Without direct and positive evidence, such as can be had only by a knowledge of all the figures, it is assuredly unfair to charge the ice dealers with having combined to "soak" the consumers, as some bitter pens and voices are charging. The hurry to jump to the conclusion that every man who deals in ice is perforce a scoundrel, is evidence of neither fairness nor wisdom. Still, it is only reasonable to say that the public does not understand why ice costs so much.

Addressing a political gathering the other day, a speaker gave his hearers a touch of the pathetic. "I miss," he said, brushing away a not unmanly tear, "I miss many of the old faces I used to shake hands with."

It is said that Rev. Dr. John Watson (an Maclaren) is degenerating into a punster. At a dinner not long ago the conversation turned to the art—or crime—of punning, and Dr. Watson ventured the opinion that he could do very well in that line, offering to try then and there. He sat silent for a few moments, and then, as he was among the guests, exclaimed, "Come along, Watson, we're all waiting." The preacher-punster replied at once, "Don't be in such a hurry."—Christian Life.

Literary Notes

Jack London's pen and Homer Davenport's pencil have been enlisted in the crusade against child labor conducted by the Anti-Child Slavery League through the Woman's Home Companion. To the September number of this magazine the brilliant young author contributes The Apostate, a story of child labor, the exceptional force of which is in part due to the writer's personal acquaintance with the conditions that he so vividly portrays; while the great cartoonist furnishes "An Industrial Success"—two full-page line drawings, which in their rugged strength are almost too near the grim literal truth to be classed as satire. Further in this connection, Samuel McCune Lindsay discusses the question "Why a National Crusade Against Child Labor?" Owen R. Lovejoy describes child slavery in Pennsylvania "In the Shadow of the Coal-breaker," while a series of photographs of children released from bondage illustrates the "Practical Work of the Anti Child Slavery League." But lighter matter is no means crowded out. "Pete Sanderson Intervenes," one of William MacLeod Raine's rollicking cowboy tales, is typical of the fiction in the number. The advantages to the household of "Free Alcohol" are set forth there are timely articles on the preparation of pickles and condiments, fashions, rug-making and embroidery.

When the Hansons took Nora as maid of all work, they knew that she was ignorant. It was a great surprise to find that occasionally Nora knew enough to put her instructors in the wrong. "Nora," said Mrs. Hanson one day, "you must buy a pair of new shoes. Those you have on leak and wet your feet." "Well, 'm, they don't leak," said pretty Nora, looking down at the offending shoes, "but they do let in, I'm thinking."—Youth's Companion.

He cut her name upon the tree,
To him she was so sweet.
But now that they've come back to town
She cuts him on the street.

THEATRES

Park Theatre.—The extraordinary success of Charles Klein's play "The Lion and the Mouse" which followed the stamp of approval put upon it by the press and the theatre-going public of Boston last fall, can now be stated without fear of contradiction to have been most emphatic and some of the results achieved supreme in modern theatricals. Since the premiere of the play last October, something over three hundred performances have been given by the original company in Boston and New York, while the second company made a limited tour of large Western cities returning to Chicago, where on September 1st it will have had an uninterrupted run of over three months at the Illinois Theatre. Indeed it may be said that "The Lion and the Mouse" has set a new pace for theatrical attractions, it being the only production in the last ten years to run through an entire Summer in New York without a single break. The Chicago company has also a record of having given thirteen performances in a single week at the Powers Theatre in Chicago, three performances being given in a single day, at eleven o'clock, at two fifteen and at eight fifteen respectively. The receipts of this week were by far the largest in the history of this playhouse. "The Lion and the Mouse" will re-open the season of the Park Theatre beginning with a matinee Monday afternoon September 3rd (Labor Day). Notwithstanding the importance of this limited engagement the regular house prices will prevail. The advance seat sale will open on Thursday, August 30th at 8.00 A. M.

Bijou Theatre.—Mr. Craig and his talented stock company, who have just closed a successful summer season at the Globe Theatre will begin their fall and winter season at the Bijou Theatre next Monday afternoon, giving as heretofore two performances daily. The Bijou Theatre, which is in Washington street next door to Keith's Theatre, is one of the coziest playhouses in Boston and admirably lends itself to the style of plays which Manager John Craig proposes to give his patrons. The opening play of the season will be "The Railroad of Love", a comedy in four acts adapted from the German by the late Augustin Daly. The play is of the most amusing sort and contains a number of characters of the farcical type. When "The Railroad of Love" was first put on at Daly's Theatre in New York it ran for nearly two hundred nights and was considered one of the brightest farce comedies which Mr. Daly ever had given his patrons. This is the first time that this play ever has been given in this city at popular prices.

Tremont Theatre.—"The Prince of Pilsen" will begin the second and final week of its engagement at the Tremont Theatre next Monday night and this will be its thirty-first week at that house, a record that is rarely paralleled in the annals of musical comedy. In fact the entire career of this tuneful and harrowing play has marked it as a work possessing exceptional qualities that make for lasting popularity. The average life of the modern musical comedy rarely exceeds two or at most three seasons, after which it is either cheapened and dwarfed for popular price patronage or it is relegated to the storehouse,—that limbo of discarded stage productions. The score or more of charming musical numbers contributed by Gustav Luder have become generally familiar to music lovers, but they possess that quality of freshness and harmonic buoyancy so rarely caught by present day composers. Frank Pixley's story, with its dainty thread of romance, is charmingly set in a maze of delightful scenic surroundings, beautiful costumes and pretty femininity. Jess Dandy, equally famed as wit, raconteur and stage entertainer, is appearing as Hans Wagner, a part which he has played more than 800 times.

Castle Square Theatre.—After a summer season of unexampled popularity, the Castle Square Theatre on Saturday evening, September 1, turns from opera to drama. With the production of "Mistress Nell" begins the tenth season of the stock company at that house. Year after year the production of popular plays by a company of efficient players has been of exceptional service in developing a taste for what is good in the modern drama, and the new season will begin with greater promise than ever. The theatre will be, as during the past two seasons, under the management of the Boston Stage Society, and the stage will be under the personal direction of William C. Masson. "Mistress Nell" will be continued through next week, with daily matinees, and the week of September 10, Clyde Fitch's comedy, "The Girl with the Green Eyes," is announced.

Keith's Theatre.—What may be called the regular fall and winter season at Keith's will commence next Monday, Labor Day, with a straight vaudeville bill that is remarkably strong. Cressy and Dayne, Ned Wayburn's "Rain-Dears" and Cliffe Berzacs' Circus are the three leading cards. Cressy and Dayne are to present one of the best sketches that has ever come from the pen of Will M. Cressy, "Grasping an Opportunity." Those who saw it when played four years ago will recall it as the skit with the very funny photograph incident as one of its merry features. A special setting has been prepared in the Keith studios especially for this act. When here last season Cliffe Berzacs' Circus created a furore, for better trained animals have never been seen on the stage, while the fun made by the unrideable donkey, "Kruger", is without limit. Ned Wayburn's "Rain-Dears", made up of Neva Aymar, a clever comedienne who was with the Rogers Brothers' company last season, and six sprightly soubrettes, is without question the best "girl" act yet seen in vaudeville. "The Two American Beauties" is the title taken by Bailey and Austin for themselves, but the title like their act is a travesty, for the make-ups are anything but beautiful. However, they lend toward the construction of one of the drollest turns on the stage. Matthews and Ashley, clever character delineators and parody singers, have a new skit called "A Smash-up in Chinatown". Others who will be in the bill are Paul Kleist, with his mixture of black art and musical novelties; "Happy Jack" Gardner, a pleasing black-face monologist; the three Durands, Parisian street singers; Marshall and Lorraine, delineators of Bowery types; Roltare, a skilful magician; the Lucados, jugglers of heavy objects, and the Kinetograph. On Monday, September 3rd, Labor Day, the performance will commence at 11 A. M., while beginning on Tuesday, the 4th, the doors will open at 12.45 P. M., daily, the show starting at 1.

Colonial Theatre.—One of the most brilliantly successful of American actors is Mr. Wright Lorimer, who will be seen at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, for an engagement covering three weeks, beginning with a Labor Day matinee on Monday, Sept 3rd, is his splendid production of the powerful romantic drama, "The Shepherd King", under the direction of Mr. William A. Brady. Mr. Lorimer has made himself the leading exponent of romantic roles on the American stage and his remarkable performance of David in "The Shepherd King" has attracted the attention of the most conservative critics and students of the drama. "The Shepherd King" is a masterful play founded on the romance in the early life of David of Israel up to the time he became king at the death of Saul. It is a melodrama in its very best form and is mounted on a scale of magnificence which makes it easily the heaviest and most sumptuous production on the American stage. The play is written in four acts and five scenes—each of which is a masterpiece of the painter's art. Mr. Lorimer's company numbers 82 players, prominent among whom are Carl Eckstrom, Mark Price, Sam Forrest, Marie Shotwell, Lorena Atwood, Margaret Hayward and Marian Ward. Mr. Lorimer's engagement will be especially notable for the presentations of Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" which are to be given at a series of special matinee performances. A complete scenic production has been made for this play under the direct supervision of Mr. Lorimer who has but recently returned from a trip to Norway. These special matinee performances will be given on Thursday of each week.

Grand Opera House.—The world famous Byrne Brothers with a clever company of comedians, pantomimists and young women presenting the latest edition of their rollicking acrobatic comedy, "Eight Bells", will be the holiday week attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House, commencing with an extra matinee on Monday, Labor Day. The production this season will be greater than ever. It contains within itself a musical comedy, a farce comedy, a pantomime, spectacular play, besides burlesque, which helps to make material constructed for laughing purposes only, and in all the Brothers Byrne and players fully succeed. The applause is incessant, and curtain calls numerous. The first scene is a pretty one representing two gardens divided by high brick walls, with a cottage on each side. During this scene a number of ridiculous incidents take place after each other so quickly that one's breath is almost taken away. The second scene is on a steamer's deck, and what takes place here is beyond description. The rapidity of the action is above memorizing, the reader must see for himself. This scene by a quick change and really wonderful mechanism, turns into a big ship at sea; two adjoining staterooms of an Atlantic steamer are shown, and while the ship is rolling on the high waves a number of peculiar acrobatic features are performed by the imitable Brothers Byrne, some of which are startling. The third act represents an island upon which the ship has been wrecked, and here occurs a number of first-class specialties, terminating with a funny fire scene, one of the most laughable effects ever produced. The Brothers Byrne's production of "Eight Bells" is a sure cure for the blues. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Norman Park.—This is Norman Park's own kind of weather for while talk and shout as they may of the country or the seashore, they are just as apt to be hot on a torrid day as any other part of this mundane sphere, but this resort on the banks of the Charles not only seems cooler but really is cooler. In the first place the ride there on the observation cars thoroughly cools the excursionist before arriving at this picturesque garden resort and having arrived there in such a comfortable frame of mind the patron has a glimpse of the sunshine only through little points here and there in the heavy foliage of the hundreds of trees that provide a perfect shade for the entire area of the park. One could hardly wish for a more delightful half hour than may be spent on the rustic plaza in front of the casino where all sorts of tempting ices and cooling beverages are served while the view extends far up the winding river, which is dotted with brightly painted canoes and their festive passengers. Incidentally, of course, amid such charming surroundings patrons like to see in the grand covered open air theatre the best of vaudeville and musical comedy entertainments correspond with their environment and the management strives to meet this condition with the best obtainable in the amusements presented here.

FREE SEEDS

Washington, D. C., August 13.

Indications are that the Congressional Free Seed Distribution will be fought more bitterly next session than ever before. Encouraged by the pronounced opposition of the Senate and House committees on Agriculture to this appropriation, and its almost universal condemnation by the press and public, those interested have undertaken a "campaign of education," to use a hackneyed term. The seed dealers make no secret of their opposition to the free distribution of common garden seeds. In an open letter to the public, Mr. Henry W. Wood, of Richmond, Va., President of the American Seed Trade Association, says that the seed dealers oppose the practice because it is an unjust interference with a legitimate industry, and because it is a waste of public money. Mr. Wood points out that the total packet-seed trade of country amounts to 120,000,000 packets, of which the government gives away 40,000,000 and the dealers sell 80,000,000. "What industry could survive if the government gave away free, half as much as those engaged in the industry sold?" he asks. He also suggests that it is time for Congress to change off and give away axes, saws, pocket-knives and looking glasses, and give the poor seed merchants a rest. The American Seed Trade Association is composed of growers, wholesalers and retailers and is thoroughly in earnest in its opposition to government interference in its business. The Wholesale Seedsmen's League is also out against it. Between them they are in touch with about ten thousand persons engaged in growing and selling seeds, and with at least fifty thousand store keepers who carry seeds in stock. As some of the larger seed merchants have more than one hundred thousand customers who purchase seeds in small lots, it is expected that they will have been in communication with hundreds of thousands of people before next session. The Granges have taken up the matter in a systematic manner. The farmers are tired of the idea that their votes can be influenced by the receipt of a package of seeds which they can buy at the corner grocery for five cents and which usually arrives too late for planting. They say they do not want sunflower and pumpkin seeds from Congress and point out that the $242,000 now wasted in this manner would support a National Agricultural College, the like of which the world has never seen, with eighty professors at $2500 a year and sufficient funds to maintain the institution. Divided among the agricultural colleges, it would give each state institution between five and ten thousand dollars more than they now receive. This, the farmers say, would do much more good than the distribution of rutabaga, turnip or parsnip seed.

An analysis of the vote on this question in the case of Representatives last May shows that the Free Seed Distribution item was inserted in the Agricultural Appropriation bill by Democratic votes. Led by Representatives Gaines of Tennessee and Lamb of Virginia, eighty-two Democrats voted for the appropriation. How they reconciled their vote to the Democratic traditional opposition to government bounties and gratuities, is not known. They rallied to their support seventy-one Republicans, including such old war-horses as Hepburn, of Iowa, Crumpacker, of Indiana, the Landis boys, Fred and Charley, of Indiana; Lacey of Iowa; Curtis and Calderhead of Kansas; Allen and Powers of Me.; Bishop, Hamilton and Fordney of Michigan, and others. All these are old campaigners and they believe that free-seeds helps their campaign. While seventy-one Republicans voted for free seeds, seventy-six voted against the appropriation, so, if it had been left to Republican votes, it would have been defeated. Of the 135 members not voting, ninety-seven are Republicans and thirty-eight Democrats.

A further analysis of the vote shows that Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia cast seventy-eight votes for free seeds to six against it. With the exception of Maryland (one) Missouri (two) and North Carolina (three), every vote cast by a member of Congress from a Southern State was in favor of "Free Seeds."

In the case of the great agricultural states of the North, East, and West, less than a majority of the whole state delegations voted for the appropriation, while in many cases there were more votes against it than for it. Indiana showed up with five, Illinois with only six, Ohio did better with eight, Pennsylvania found ten trusty "free-seeders" while Minnesota produced only one. Massachusetts cast seven votes against and only two for, "Free Seeds" got half the Nebraska delegation, but only four votes from Iowa to six against. New York cast fifteen votes against to five votes for, with seventeen members not voting. From this it is apparent that the item was put in the appropriation bill by Democratic votes, the bulk of which came from the South.

While there is no politics in the matter, those opposed to this distribution will try to get their friends to write to Senators and Representatives, urging them to vote against the appropriation next session. The National Grange, many State and Local Granges have already adopted resolutions condemning the appropriation, and other Granges and societies of farmers are expected to do likewise. The press will doubtless continue its hostility as it has always roundly denounced this form of petty graft.

Can you answer this question? Why do you bake bread in hot weather? If you had to depend on ordinary baker's bread you could answer it very easily, but if you would try CREAM-MALT BREAD (the oval loaf) you wouldn't take time to answer such a question. You would just stop baking bread as a matter of course. Fresh daily at your grocer's. 10c a loaf.

—While driving on Dudley street Sunday afternoon Mr. Timothy Galvin, who lives at 361 Dudley street, was thrown from his buggy and considerably injured. He was removed to the hospital in the ambulance for treatment. He had just left his house and was about to turn the corner of Brookline street when the horse became frightened and started to run. While turning the sharp corner Mr. Galvin was thrown out.
—The final union service of the First Congregational, First Baptist and Methodist Episcopal churches of the season took place Sunday. The service was held in the Congregational church and the cool weather brought out one of the largest congregations of the summer. The sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. Edward M. Noyes. Next Sunday the regular services will be resumed in all the churches in this village, a substitute clergyman having been secured to preach in the Baptist church owing to the absence of Rev. Dr. Everett D. Burr, who resigned last week after six years' service as pastor.
—In the final round of the tennis tournament in doubles at North Scituate Beach, which was played off on the courts of the Hatherly club, Saturday afternoon, the winners were Messrs. C. G. Plimpton and E. B. Plimpton, the crack players of the Newton Centre Squash tennis club. The tournament had progressed for several days and was watched with much interest by many of the summer residents of that resort, among whom are not a few Newton Centre people. The Plimpton brothers had as their opponents in the finals Messrs. C. R. Carrier and S. E. Sweet, whom they defeated by scores of 5-7, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5 and 6-1.

O'HEARN-BARRETT

The wedding of Miss Mary E. Barrett, daughter of Mrs. Ann J. Barrett of Chandler place, Newton Upper Falls, and James T. O'Hearn of Brookline took place Wednesday morning at Newton Upper Falls. Nuptial mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church by Rev. Timothy J. Danahy, in the presence of many friends of the couple. The bride was gowned in white messaline over white tulle. She was attended by Miss Elizabeth H. Barrett, her sister, as maid of honor, who was gowned in pink messaline. The best man was John O'Hearn of Brookline, and the ushers were John W. Barrett and J. J. Warren of Newton Upper Falls and M. Lally of Brookline. A reception followed at the home of the bride. After a trip Mr. and Mrs. O'Hearn will reside at 202 Eliot street, Newton Upper Falls.

A Rare Bargain

Investors have an unusual opportunity next week Wednesday at four o'clock in the afternoon to secure a rare bargain in the forced sale of the elegant property occupied by Mr. George L. Forristall at the corner of Ward street and Morsland avenue, Newton Centre. The house was built for the owner only a few years ago, without regard to cost and has every modern convenience and is up-to-date in each particular. The estate is splendidly located within a stone's throw of the Commonwealth avenue boulevard and within easy walking distance of the village stores, churches and public buildings. The neighborhood is one of the best in the city, and besides the present value of the property, the future cannot fail to add to its attractiveness from the investor's standpoint. Remember the time and place, Wednesday, Sept. 5 at 4 P. M.

The Management takes pleasure in announcing the engagement of SIGNOR PIETRO VALLINI, of Milan, Italy, as a member of the Vocal Faculty.

A NUMBER OF FREE SCHOLARSHIPS in the Violin Department will be granted for the coming school year. Applications should be made to

RALPH L. FLANDERS, Manager.

Was on the Wrong Side

Frank H. Townsend was arraigned in court Tuesday upon complaint of Patrolman James Mullen on a charge of driving an automobile on the wrong side of Commonwealth avenue at Chestnut Hill on Friday. Mr. Townsend said that he had just come over the line from Brighton and that although he was aware of the law prohibiting motor vehicles from the south side of the thoroughfare he was obliged to go on that side as the other side was torn up for repairs. He was found guilty and the case was placed on file.
